HISTORICAL RECORD OF THE IMPERIAL VISIT TO INDIA, 1911.

This book, which has been compiled by the Government of India from the official records, contains a complete and authoritative account of the proceedings connected with the visit of Their Imperial Majesties to India and with the Coronation Durbar of December 1911, including lists of the persons taking part in all the various celebrations and ceremonies at which Their Imperial Majesties were present, as well as a large number of illustrations, portraits of Ruling Princes and others, coloured Persian and Sanscrit texts, maps, plans, etc.

The book has been published by Mr. John Murray, Albemarle Street, London, W., and copies are now procurable from all the principal booksellers.

There are two editions—a popular one in a cloth binding, price Rs. 7-8-0, and a very limited edition de luxe, price Rs. 250, which has been subscribed for. As the popular edition is strictly limited, and a considerable portion of it has been absorbed in requisitions already received and in the requirements of libraries, schools, etc., it will probably be exhausted very soon after publication. Those who have not yet ordered copies but require them are therefore advised to order at an early date. Application should be made to the Superintendent, Government Printing, India, Calcutta.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, APRIL 19, 1915

Supplementary SESAMUM forecast, 1914-15

This forecast supplements the final forecast issued on the 18th January last. It incorporates the final estimates from Madras and Hyderabad.

Madras (17 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India). The total area under sesamum is estimated at 804,900 acres, which is 0·5 per cent less than the actuals of last year. The yield is estimated at 82,800 tons, being nearly 15 per cent above that of last year. The season has, on the whole, been more favourable than those of recent years. Anantapur in the Deccan reports that the crop there is poor, being only about half the normal, and most of the Circars only report three quarters crop. In the south the crop is reported to vary from three quarters to full normal.

Hyderabad reports the area sown to be 598,900 acres, which is 2 per cent less than last year's area. The yield is estimated at 26,900 tons, being an increase of 7 per cent over last year's yield. The increase in yield is reported to be due to seasonable and evenly distributed rainfall.

The estimates in the table appended to the final forecast in January last need modification in accordance with the foregoing reports. The general result for all the provinces from which reports have been received is :—

	Acres	Tons
1914-15	4,463,400	493,200
1913-14	4,224,600	361,300
Average for five years ending 1912-13 (a)	4,335,400	405,700

The detailed figures are as follows :—

Total .	493,200	361,300	+131,900

These figures do not include the so-called mixed crop of the United Provinces, that is to say, the sesamum that is grown interspersed with other crops on the same land. The mixed crop in the United Provinces is this year roughly estimated at about 1,000,000 acres, yielding 85,000 tons, as against 850,000 acres yielding 42,000 tons last year. These figures are, however, conjectural, and the produce is used largely for home consumption.

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, the crop is grown in certain other tracts in British India (mainly in Burma), and the average area so grown for the last five years has been some 1,095,000 acres. An addition of approximately 20 per cent should be made to the total estimated outturn on this account.

Exports.—The quantity exported by sea to foreign countries during the last five years has been (in tons) :—

1910-11	162,328
1911-12	94,820
1912-13	77,859
1913-14	112,201
1914-15	46,705

(a) Excluding Ajmer-Merwara
(b) Includes Native States

The exports in tons in 1914-15 were to the following countries, the exports in the previous year being stated in brackets : Belgium 5,500 (33,779), France 13,323 (22,207), Austria-Hungary 4,093 (19,342), Germany 1,870 (16,510), Italy 9,587 (14,293), other countries 12,332 (6,070).

Chart.—The chart below shows the present estimates of the total area and yield as compared with the figures of the preceding nine years. The curve for area represents millions of acres and that for yield thousands of tons.

Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915.

No. 5073-9.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Sections 3 and 4 of the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Governor General in Council is pleased to make the following rules :—

1. These rules may be called the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915.

2. The Controller of Patents and Designs may, on the application of any person, and subject to such terms and conditions, if any, as he thinks fit, order the avoidance or suspension, in whole or in part, of any patent or license and of the registration of any design, and of all or any right in a registered design the person entitled to the benefit of which is a subject of any State at war with His Majesty, and the Controller before granting any such application may require to be satisfied—

(a) that the person entitled to such benefit is the subject of a State at war with His Majesty ;

(b) that the person applying intends to manufacture, or cause to be manufactured, the patented article ; or to carry on, or cause to be carried on, the patented process ; or to manufacture, or cause to be manufactured, the goods, or any of them, in respect of which the design is registered ;

(c) that it is in the general interest of the country, or of a section of the community, or of a trade, that such avoidance or suspension should be ordered.

3. The fee to be paid on any such application shall be Rs. 20.

4. The application shall be filed with the Controller of Patents and Designs, who shall notify any person whose name appears on the Registers of Patents or Designs as having an interest and shall appoint a date for hearing the application. The application and the date of the hearing shall be notified in the Gazette of India. The applicant shall produce evidence at the hearing to satisfy the Controller in respect of (a), (b) and (c) of Rule 2 and that he himself is not a subject of any State at war with His Majesty. The patentee, or proprietor of the design, or anyone interested, may appear at the hearing in opposition to the application, provided that notice of his intention is given to the Controller at the Patent Office before the date of hearing.

5. In any case in which the Controller makes an Order under these rules avoiding or suspending, in whole or in part, a patent, or license, or avoiding or suspending the registration, and all or any rights conferred by the registration, of any design, the Controller may in his discretion grant in favour of any person or persons other than the subject of any State at war with His Majesty, licenses to make, sell or use, the patented invention or registered design so avoided or suspended, upon such terms and conditions, and either for the whole term of the patent or registration of the design, or for such less period, as the Controller may think fit.

6. The decision of the Controller shall be subject to appeal to the Governor General in Council.

7. The Governor General in Council may at any time, in his absolute discretion, revoke or vary any avoidance or suspension or license ordered under these rules.

8. The Controller may avoid or suspend any proceedings on any application made under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, by a subject of any State at war with His Majesty.

9. The Controller may extend any time prescribed by the Indian Patents and Design Act, 1911, for doing any act or filing any document upon such terms and subject to such conditions as he may think fit—

(a) where it is shown to his satisfaction that the applicant, patentee or proprietor, as the case may be, was prevented from doing the said act or filing the said document, by reason of active service or enforced absence from this country, or any other circumstances arising from the present state of war, which in the opinion of the Controller, would justify such extension;

(b) where the doing of any act would, by reason of the circumstances arising from the present state of war, be prejudicial or injurious to the rights or interests of any applicant, patentee or proprietor, as aforesaid.

10. Save as otherwise provided in these rules the procedure prescribed by the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, and the rules made thereunder shall, so far as the same can be made applicable, apply to all proceedings taken under these rules.

11. These rules shall apply to any exclusive privilege acquired under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888, as if such exclusive privilege had been a patent granted under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

MUNICIPALITIES.

Simla, the 28th April 1915.

RESOLUTION.

Local Self-Government Policy of the Government of India.

Historical retrospect.

Local self-government as a conscious process of administrative devolution and political education dates, outside presidency towns, from the financial reforms of Lord Mayo's government. Consultative committees had indeed been appointed in various towns in 1850, and measures were taken in 1864 and following years to give effect to the recommendations of the report of the Royal Army Sanitary Commission, which was published in 1863, but no comprehensive scheme was introduced until the years following 1870. Legislation affecting several provinces was then undertaken. Lord Ripon's government in 1882 carried still further the principles of local self-government with the object, by measures cautiously but substantially progressive, of inducing the people themselves to undertake, as far as might be and subject to necessary control from without, the management of their own local affairs, and of developing and creating, if need be, a capacity for self-help in respect of all matters that had not, for administrative reasons, to be retained in the hands of a representative of Government. Various Acts were passed, by which the elective principle, financial independence and the reduction of official control were given a wide extension. In two resolutions nos. $\frac{}{146\text{-}164}$, dated the 24th October 1896, and nos. 18-37, dated the 20th August 1897, respectively, Lord Elgin's government again reviewed the subject and laid down further conditions of progress. Important principles have, from time to time, been considered by the Government of India in connection with the revision of local self-government Acts and otherwise, and recently the whole field of policy has, in their survey of Indian administration, been ably and exhaustively reviewed by the Royal Commission upon Decentralization.

Substantial progress.

2. The Governor-General in Council is glad to be assured by the report of the Commission and the opinions of local Governments and Administrations upon it, that the results have on the whole justified the policy out of which local self-government arose. The degree of success varies from province to province and from one part of a province to another, but there is definite and satisfactory evidence of the growth of a feeling of good citizenship, particularly in the towns. The spread of education is largely responsible for the quickening of a sense of responsibility and improvements in the machinery. In certain provinces, beneficial results have followed the elaboration of a system of local audit. On all sides there are signs of vitality and growth.

Future general policy.

3. The obstacles in the way of realising completely the ideals which have prompted action in the past are still, however, by no means inconsiderable. The smallness and inelasticity of local revenues, the difficulty of devising further forms of taxation, the indifference still prevailing in many places towards all forms of public life, the continued unwillingness of many Indian gentlemen to submit to the troubles, expense and inconveniences of election, the unfitness of some of those whom these obstacles do not deter, the prevalence of sectarian animosities, the varying character of the municipal area, all these are causes which cannot but impede the free and full development of local self-government. The growing demand among the educated classes in towns for greater efficiency, involving more direct expert control, in matters affecting public health and education, is a further influence of a different character. A similar tendency, it may be observed, is discernible in England and in other European countries, the Governments of which have shown a growing disposition to place on central authorities the duty of stimulating and encouraging local bodies in cases of default or deficiency on their part, and to give to the former powers of intervention and, in case of need, of actual supersession of the latter. These and similar considerations indicate the need for caution in delegating powers to non-official bodies, when they are not as yet adapted nor prepared for them. But on the whole the Government of India declare unhesitatingly in favour of a general policy of further progress, limited only by such conditions as local circumstances may dictate. Uniformity, even were it attainable, would be undesirable as tending to monotony, lifelessness and discouragement of new experiments. But, in fact, any attempt to exact uniformity in local administration would be foredoomed to failure. In each province, sometimes in each part of a province, the administrative system has grown up on lines of its own with reference to local needs and the wishes and abilities of the people. On a review of all the circumstances, the Government of India have decided to accept in almost every case the conclusion of the local Government or Administration as to the degree of progress possible at the present time. But in the more backward provinces in particular, it is their conviction that there is room for advance, and that the aim to be steadily pursued is abstention from interference in detail and increased reliance on the non-official element in local bodies.

Reforms accepted by local Governments.

4. Local Governments and Administrations in general are prepared to advance in the direction of the main recommendations of the Commission. They propose in varying degrees to expand the electoral element in the constitution of local bodies, to extend the employment of non-official chairmen in municipalities, to allow local bodies more ample control over budgets and freer powers of reappropriation, to concede increased authority to local bodies over establishments and to relax existing restrictions in regard to outside sanction for expenditure on works of importance. These changes will mark a real and immediate extension of the principles of local self-government.

5. The Government of India now propose to state the principal conclusions that have been reached after full discussion in the public press, in debates of the Legislative Councils, and in consultation with local Governments and, in certain matters, with His Majesty's Secretary of State, on the questions that arise respecting (1) towns, (2) districts, (3) villages or other small local areas; in other words, in relation to (1) municipal boards, (2) district and sub-district boards, and (3) panchayats or other unions. In each case they will consider the constitution of the local body, its ability to tax and its powers in regard to its budget and its establishment. Finally, they will deal with the recommendations of the Commission in connection with presidency towns and Rangoon.

MUNICIPAL BOARDS.

Elective majority.

6. The Commission recommended that municipal boards should ordinarily be constituted on the basis of a substantial elective majority, and that nominated members should be limited to a number sufficient to provide for the due representation of minorities and official experience. This recommendation has already been adopted in several provinces and is generally accepted by local Governments and the Government of India, subject to the proviso that the principle should in places, where its success is doubtful, be introduced gradually, and after experiment in selected municipalities.

Chairmen.

7. The Commission also proposed that the municipal chairman should usually be an elected non-official, that Government officers should not be allowed to stand for election, and that where a nominated chairman might still be required he should be an official. The following statistics show how in the different provinces chairmen of municipalities are at present secured:—

Non-official chairmen.

8. The majority of local Governments are in favour of substituting, so far as possible, non-official for official chairmen, and the Government of India are in full sympathy with the proposal. The increasing burden of administration, apart from other considerations, renders it desirable that the district officer should be relieved of the executive control of municipal bodies. The Governor-General in Council recognises, however, that the change must be made gradually, and that in the absence of suitable candidates, it may not be possible to make it finally and once for all in particular places. He agrees with the opinion expressed in several quarters that discretion should be reserved to a local Government to nominate a non-official as chairman. Many gentlemen of influence, well fitted to be chairmen of boards, are not prepared to offer themselves for election, and insistence on election as the only alternative to the nomination of an official would unnecessarily narrow the field of choice. Nor does it appear necessary to prohibit boards under any circumstances from electing an official as their chairman. It may be desirable, however, to require the election of an official as chairman to be confirmed by the Commissioner, or even higher authority.

The Bombay system in larger municipalities.

9. The Commission suggested that some of the largest cities should adopt the system in force in Bombay city, where there is an elected chairman, who is the official mouthpiece of the corporation as a whole, the executive administration, however, vesting in a full-time nominated official subject to the control of the corporation and of a standing committee thereof. In the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901, also there are provisions under which a Chief Officer can be appointed by a city municipality, on its own initiative or at the instance of the Governor in Council. The Governor in Council may also appoint an executive officer known as the Municipal Commissioner for any municipal district which contains one hundred thousand inhabitants, or for any other municipal district on the application of the municipality, provided that such application has been previously supported by not less than two-thirds of the whole body of councillors. A Municipal Commissioner has in some respects more extensive powers than a Chief Officer. Under this arrangement the direction of the general policy of a municipality vests in the whole body of councillors, while the executive power, with certain reservations, vests in the Municipal Commissioner. The municipal committee may cause him to furnish any returns and reports on matters appertaining to municipal administration and they retain financial control. The Chief Officer or Municipal Commissioner is not removeable, except by order of the Governor in Council, or by the vote of three-fourths of the whole number of councillors. These officers exercise certain executive powers specifically conferred on them by the Municipal Act, and such other powers as may be delegated to them under the provisions of the Act; and the Governor in Council may require that they shall be invested with any powers which can be lawfully delegated. The system works well in Bombay. The Government of India do not desire to press for its adoption in provinces where it may not be suited to the local conditions. They are, however, of opinion that it has the advantages of ensuring a continuous and strong executive administration by an efficient paid staff, while maintaining the corporate control and activity of the municipal board. It is in fact not dissimilar to the system in force in England They commend it to local Governments as a means of overcoming, at any rate in large cities, the difficulties inherent in the introduction of the important changes contemplated, especially when non-official chairmen are busy professional men. In smaller towns they suggest that the object aimed at might be attained by the wider delegation of executive functions to responsible secretaries, engineers and health officers and that power to enforce such delegation might be secured by legislation.

Financial resources.

10. The aggregate income of 701 municipalities in existence at the close of 1912-1913 (excluding the presidency towns and Rangoon) amounted to £3,282,845 (R4,92,42,675) apart from loans, sales of securities and other extraordinary receipts, or an average of about £4,683 (R70,245) a year. This income was distributed as follows :—

Taxation.

11. The taxes, tolls and fees which may ordinarily be levied by municipalities are provided for in the municipal enactments in force in the different provinces. They are imposed in most cases with the previous sanction of the local Government concerned and within the limits laid down in the Acts. They usually take one or other of the following forms:—

(1) Tax on arts, professions, trades, callings, offices and appointments.
(2) Tax on buildings, lands and holdings.
(3) Water, drainage, sewage, conservancy, scavenging and lighting tax.
(4) Tax on vehicles, boats, palanquins and animals kept for use or used within municipal limits.
(5) Tax on circumstances and property.
(6) Tax on private menials and domestic servants.
(7) Tax on private markets.
(8) Octroi on animals or goods or both, brought within municipal limits for consumption or use.
(9) Tolls on vehicles and animals entering municipal limits, and tolls on ferries, bridges and metalled roads.
(10) Fees on the registration of cattle sold within municipal limits and of carts and other vehicles.

The taxes provided for in the Acts vary, however, in the different provinces, and not all these taxes are actually levied in any one province. Any tax other than those specified in the Acts, which is proposed to be levied, ordinarily requires and should continue to require the sanction of the Governor-General in Council.

12. The most important taxes now in force are octroi duties, levied principally in Bombay, the United Provinces, the Punjab, the Central Provinces and the North-West Frontier Province, and the tax on houses and lands which holds the chief place in the other provinces as well as in Bombay city.

Octroi and the terminal tax.

13. The octroi system in the existing circumstances of the country has certain obvious advantages. As a tax octroi is productive and grows with the prosperity of the town. Its imposition is sanctioned by immemorial usage, and the people are habituated to the system by long custom. The tax is usually paid in small amounts and the effect of the payment is not generally felt as a burden. On the other hand, there is no doubt that it provides constant opportunities for fraud, delay and oppression owing to the necessity of entrusting large discretionary powers to a subordinate agency, that it is expensive to collect and wasteful and, finally, that in many places it constitutes a serious burden on trade in general, and in particular on through trade, notwithstanding the provision made for refunds. On the recommendation of a strong representative committee and the local Government, the Government of India have sanctioned an experiment in the United Provinces, which involves (a) the substitution of direct taxation for octroi in the smaller towns, and (b) the application to a large number of other towns in which conditions are suitable of the system of a terminal tax, or light transit dues on imports or exports, subject to no refunds. The Government of the United Provinces considers that some of the main benefits of such a system, and in particular a reduction of the high cost of collection, can only be secured if the tax is collected through the agency of the railway companies, who should be adequately remunerated for their services. The Government of India are prepared to facilitate negotiations to this end. The Government of Bombay have assented to the tentative replacement of octroi by a terminal tax in a few municipalities selected from those desirous of making the experiment. The question is under consideration or experiment in other provinces also. The Government of India while adhering to the principle that municipal taxation should not operate, so far as can be avoided, as a transit duty on through trade, are prepared to concede that a light terminal tax with no refunds may in practice prove less burdensome to through trade than the octroi system as hitherto administered, provided that the following conditions are observed—viz., (1) that the terminal tax, wherever imposed, should be substantially lower in its rates than the octroi which it replaces, (2) that it should be limited to places where there are special grounds for applying it, which must be adequately demonstrated, (3) that it should be regarded as facilitating the transition to a system in which direct taxation will form an increasingly important factor, and not as an elastic means of progressively increasing the resources of municipalities apart from normal development due to increase of traffic and (4) that it should not be adjusted with the primary object of compensating municipalities for the loss of octroi.

House and land tax.

14. The house and land tax is the chief source of municipal income in Madras, Bengal, Burma, Bihar and Orissa, and Assam and it has been imposed with some success in portions of Northern India. This tax, however, is difficult of assessment, in many places, where it is the custom to own rather than to rent dwelling houses, because in such cases the house affords no indication of the financial status of the owner. Many aristocratic but impoverished families live in large buildings which are merely relics of vanished prosperity, while the rich trader often remains content with the humble dwelling in which he was born. There is, however, a growing tendency on the part of the professional and trading classes to spend a larger proportion of their incomes on securing sanitary accommodation, so that it is reasonable to anticipate that the house tax revenue will gradually expand, and will generally be contributed by those best able to pay. The technical and administrative difficulties of assessment have in places been overcome by entrusting the preparation and periodic revision of registers to outside agency.

Tax on professions and trades.

15. A tax on professions and trades yields a considerable revenue in certain provinces, e.g., £17,239 (Rs. 2,58,591) in Madras, £4,697 (Rs. 70,465) in Bengal, £14,106 (Rs. 2,11,599) in the United Provinces and £4,869 (Rs. 73,036) in the Central Provinces. It has also been imposed in some towns in Northern India. But neither it nor the tax on circumstances and property is likely to yield a large revenue, and there is always danger lest local taxation of this kind encroach on the field of Imperial taxation.

Tax on pilgrims.

16. In Benares there is a form of terminal tax which is imposed, with certain exceptions, on passengers coming to or leaving that station by rail. There is a radius of exemption beyond which the tax is levied and it is collected by the railway companies as a surcharge on railway fares. A similar tax is also in force in Calcutta which is levied by the Calcutta Improvement Trust and is collected from passengers entering or leaving that city by rail or steamer. In Hardwar, Ajudhia and Thaneswar, there is a tax on pilgrims and other persons who enter the limits of those municipalities. The tax at Hardwar is levied on railway passengers throughout the year, while that at the other two municipalities is imposed only on the occasion of certain special fairs. In Bombay a pilgrim tax may be levied under section 59 (b) (x) of the District Municipal Act, III of 1901.

Powers of taxation.

17. The Commission were of opinion that municipalities should have full liberty to impose or alter taxation within the limits laid down by the municipal laws but that the sanction of an outside authority to any increase in taxation should be required where the law did not prescribe a maximum rate. Subject to the general control of the Government of India over the principles to be followed, the sanction of the local Government is at present necessary to every proposal for the imposition of taxation. A maximum rate is prescribed in the Madras, Bengal, and Burma Acts, and in the Punjab, United Provinces and Central Provinces, so far as regards the tax on buildings and lands; but none is laid down in Bombay. The recommendations of the Commission do not command general assent. It is pointed out, for instance, that a municipality might reduce its taxation without due consideration to the needs of the administration and the security of loans. The Government of India, while recognizing the force of such objections, are, on the whole, in general sympathy with the Commission's recommendations. They think, however, that power to vary any tax might be reserved by such local Governments as are unable to accept in full the recommendations of the Commission and that in the case of indebted municipalities the previous sanction of higher authority should be required to any alteration of taxation.

18. Municipal finance has shown a marked expanse during the last decade.

Subventions by Government.

The total income of 701 municipalities in 1912-1913 was £3,282,845 (Rs. 4,92,42,675) as compared with £1,844,081 (Rs. 2,76,61,215) for 753 municipalities in 1902-1903. Contributions from Government have materially assisted this expansion. Since 1911, the Government of India have made grants amounting to £3,076,466 (Rs. 4,61,47,000), of which £368,200 (Rs. 55,23,000) are recurring, for urban sanitation. Municipalities have also received their share—the exact figure is not easily ascertainable—of the large educational grants made by the Government of India since 1911, amounting to about £3,987,800 (Rs. 5,98,17,000), of which £826,666 (Rs. 1,24,00,000) are recurring. Municipal boards have been relieved of all charges for the maintenance of police within municipal limits. In almost every province the recommendation that municipalities should be relieved from financial responsibility for famine relief and should receive assistance from Government in the case of severe epidemics, has been already given effect to, or the principle has been accepted.

There is a growing demand on every side for improvements and it is not possible for all municipalities to finance large schemes of water-supply and drainage without substantial aid. Such aid has been freely given by the Imperial and local Governments. The power of the Government to make grants is, however, limited and financial assistance of this nature cannot be expected unless the rate-payers are prepared to bear a reasonable proportion of the burden. Where, however, further taxation is not possible the Government of India trust that municipalities will bear in mind the possibility of supplementing taxation by development of municipal property, so as to ensure the best possible returns and by maintaining the principle that special services such as the supply of water, electric lighting, etc., should, as far as possible, pay for themselves.

The Government of India have also accepted a further recommendation of the Commission, namely, that assistance may legitimately be given by Government to poorer municipalities which, without it, would be unable to carry on the normal standard of administration required from them. In such cases, the Government of India agree with the Commission that assistance can best be given, when it is given, by a general recurring grant-in-aid, which should be at the discretion of the local Government and met from its own resources.

19. The Commission proposed that if a municipal or rural board has to pay for a service it should control it, and that where it is expedient that the control should be largely in the hands of Government, the service should be a provincial one.

Payment and control of services.

The Government of India while not prepared to accept the proposal in full have approved it in a somewhat modified form. They consider that charges should be remitted in cases where a local body contributes to Government for services inherent in the duty of supervision and control by Government officers, or for services which cannot expediently be performed except by Government agency. For example, Government may properly cease to charge for clerical establishments in the offices of supervision and control, or for the collection of District cesses which it is clearly expedient to realise along with the Government revenue. On this principle they have made assignments which will relieve both municipalities and rural boards of payments amounting to £40,000 (Rs. 6,00,000) a year approximately.

20. It was suggested by the Commission that municipalities should be empowered to levy a special rate for the construction or promotion of tramways.

Tramway cess.

Local Governments generally are doubtful as to the value of the proposal. The Government of India will, however, be prepared to consider any practical proposal to this end, which they may receive.

21. Commenting on the minute control exercised in some provinces over municipal finance, the Commission recommended that municipalities should have a free hand with regard to their budgets; the only check required should, they thought, be the maintenance of a minimum standing balance to be prescribed by the local Government. They acknowledged that relaxed control might lead to mistakes and mismanagement, but they were of opinion that municipal bodies could attain adequate financial responsibility only by the exercise of such powers and by having to bear the consequences of their errors. Further checks would be provided by the control which local Governments would exercise over loans, and by the power which should be reserved to compel a municipality to discharge its duties in case of default. The system proposed is stated to be in force in the Bombay Presidency where, however, no minimum balance is required by law. The Government of the United Provinces accepts the recommendations subject to the condition that Commissioners should pass and that Government should see the budgets of indebted municipalities. The Punjab Government also agrees subject to the proviso that the budget of an indebted municipality should be forwarded to the Government for information. The Government of Bengal are prepared to introduce the change experimentally in certain selected municipalities. They intend also to issue general instructions to Commissioners in this province to abstain from interference in details and to restrict their supervision to securing (1) a minimum closing balance, (2) provision for the service of loans, (3) the observance of the provisions of the Act or statutory rules and of any standing orders of Government. Other Governments concede certain relaxations of existing rules. The Government of India accept these opinions for the present, but they nevertheless regard the recommendations of the Commission as expressing a policy to be steadily kept in view and gradually realised.

Budgets and financial control.

22. The Commission proposed that the existing restrictions on municipalities, which require outside sanction for works estimated to cost more than a certain amount, should be removed but that Government should scrutinize and sanction estimates of projects to be carried out from loan funds. The majority of the local Governments are prepared to relax the existing rules in the direction of giving more freedom to municipal boards. The Government of India are in favour of extended freedom subject, where necessary, to proper precautions against extravagant and ill-considered projects. They are content, however, to leave the precise extent of relaxation to be determined by local Governments. One important factor in this connection will be the quality of the professional agency available in the various boards. In their resolution no. 1019-A., dated the 10th November 1914, promulgating rules relating to the grant of loans to local bodies under the Local Authorities Loans Act, 1914, the Government of India have emphasised the necessity for a proper scrutiny of projects financed with borrowed money and they trust that the rules in question will be carefully observed.

Estimates for public works.

23. It was recommended by the Commission that the degree of outside control over municipal establishments should be relaxed, that the appointment of municipal secretaries or other chief executive officers, of engineers and health officers, where these exist, should require the sanction of the local Government in the case of cities, and of the Commissioner elsewhere, and that the same sanction should be required for any alteration in the emoluments of these posts, and for the appointment and dismissal of the occupants. As regards other appointments, they proposed that the local Governments should lay down for municipal boards general rules in respect to such matters as leave, acting and travelling allowances, pensions or provident funds and maximum salaries, and that their sanction should be required for any deviation therefrom. Almost all local Governments have expressed their willingness to relax outside control over the appointment of the staff employed by local bodies. In Bombay, the system is generally that recommended by the Commission. In some other provinces, the existing rules give a free hand to municipalities, subject to outside control in the case of certain appointments. The Government of India, while considering that Government control over other posts might reasonably be relaxed, accept the view that outside sanction should be required to the appointment or dismissal of secretaries, engineers and health officers, and they have already advised local Governments to take powers where these do not exist, to require a municipality to appoint a health officer and to veto the appointment of an unfit person. Such powers already exist in the Bombay Presidency and have recently been taken by legislation in Bengal. The Imperial and Provincial Governments have given liberal grants to selected municipalities in order to establish a trained service of health officers and sanitary inspectors, the conditions of these grants being, as in England, such as will ensure the appointment of qualified men and reasonable security of tenure.

Special outside control.

24. The Commission thought that the Collector should retain certain powers, given under the existing Acts, e.g., the power to suspend in certain cases the operation of municipal resolutions and that the Commissioner should be able to require a municipality which had neglected a particular service to take such action as he may consider necessary. The local Governments generally and the Government of India are of opinion that special powers of outside control are necessary and should continue.

Town-planning and relief of congested areas.

25. The question of extending the powers of selected municipalities to enable them to relieve the pressure of population in congested areas, and to undertake schemes of orderly town-planning in order to provide for future needs, has been dealt with by the Government of India in paragraphs 43 and 44 of their Sanitary Resolution nos. 888-908, dated the 23rd May 1914. A Town Planning Bill, combining many original features with others derived from the latest English and Continental legislation, has now been passed into law in the Bombay Presidency, and the Government of India will watch with deep interest the results of this experiment, which will, they trust, pioneer a fruitful expansion of municipal activities in India.

RURAL BOARDS (DISTRICT AND SUB-DISTRICT).

Sub-district boards.

26. The Commission desired that sub-district boards should be universally established and that they should be the principal agencies of rural boards administration. They noted that there was a considerable body of evidence that the sub-district boards existing in Bombay, Bengal, Punjab, Bihar and Orissa and the Central Provinces had not been efficient or successful bodies, and this they attributed largely to the circumscription of their powers and resources. They thought that these boards should have adequate funds and a large measure of independence, and that their jurisdiction should be so limited in area as to ensure local knowledge and interest on the part of the members, and be at the same time a unit well known to the people. For this purpose they suggested the taluka or tahsil as a suitable unit. The system recommended by the Commission is in force in Madras, where, however, the territorial jurisdiction is coterminous with the revenue division. In Bombay the taluka board is universal and is the principal agency in rural board administration. In Bengal and in Bihar and Orissa the sub-district boards are merely the agents of the district boards and have restricted powers. The local Governments concerned deprecate such a reconstitution as would involve sapping the vitality of district boards while in entire agreement with the Commission that sufficient use has not hitherto been made of these bodies. In the Central Provinces where also sub-district boards with limited powers exist, a scheme has been introduced for enlarging their scope by entrusting them with the management of minor public works, sanitation, water-supply, etc., and placing an adequate share of the district council funds at their disposal for these purposes. In Assam the rural boards have jurisdiction over sub-divisional areas, and perform the duties assigned elsewhere to district boards. The Governments of the United Provinces and the Punjab and the Chief Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province consider the scheme unsuitable in view of local conditions. Districts in Northern India are comparatively small and form an easily controlled unit, communications are good, and moreover under existing conditions in the provinces concerned it would be more difficult to secure competent boards in tahsils than in districts. The Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces considers, moreover, that there is every prospect of a steady advance in the reality and utility of district boards by a continuous and orderly development of the existing system of delegation to tahsil or sub-divisional committees. The Punjab Government favours the formation of sub-committees within a district board on a local basis. The Government of India accept the views of the several local Governments in regard to their own provinces.

Elective majority.

27. District and sub-district boards, in the opinion of the Commission, should contain a large preponderance of elected members, together with a nominated element sufficient to secure the due representation of minorities and of official experience.

In the United Provinces, the number of nominated members on a district board cannot exceed one-third of the elected members, while in the Central Provinces the number of such members cannot exceed one-third of the total number. The Government of Madras are prepared to raise the proportion of elected members to two-thirds and one-half of the maximum strength on district and sub-district boards, respectively. In Bombay, the Governor in Council regards it as inadvisable, in present conditions, to provide for an elected majority on the boards. There is already a substantial majority of elected members both in district and sub-district boards in Bengal, and in Bihar and Orissa. In the Punjab, the elective system has been applied to many districts and the local Government has expressed its readiness to extend it. The Chief Commissioner of Assam has adopted the principle of granting an elective majority. In the North-West Frontier Province, the change is not yet practicable owing to factional and tribal feeling. It will be seen that local Governments in general are in sympathy with the Commission's proposal.

Chairmen.

28. The Commission were of opinion that an official should remain, as he usually is at present, chairman of every district and sub-district board. They considered that the removal of the district and sub-divisional officer from the presidentship of rural boards would have the effect of dissociating them from the general interests of the district in such matters as roads, education, sanitation, etc., and would divorce them from healthy contact with instructed non-official opinion. They differentiated the circumstances of rural boards from those of municipalities, in that the latter are less connected with general district administration, that they have reached a higher level of political education and that the jurisdictional area is much smaller and more compact. All local Governments have accepted this view with which the Government of India are in agreement, though they will have no objection to non-official chairmen being retained where such exist, or appointed where a local Government or Administration desires to make the experiment.

Financial resources.

29. The funds of district boards are mainly derived from a cess levied upon agricultural land over and above the land revenue, with which it is collected, and not usually exceeding one anna in the rupee ($6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent.) on the annual rent value. Since 1905 this income has been specially supplemented by a Government contribution amounting to 25 per cent. of the then existing income. Besides this, special grants are frequently made to district boards by local Governments. The total number of district and sub-district boards in 1912-1913 was 199 and 536, respectively, with an aggregate income of £3,787,219 (R 5,68,08,292). In the same year they received specially large grants from the sums allotted by the Imperial Government for education and sanitation. Prior to 1913 the district boards of several provinces did not receive the whole of the land cess. For example, this cess in Bengal and Bihar and Orissa was divided into two parts, viz., the road cess and the public works cess. The district boards only enjoyed the benefits of the road cess, while the public works cess belonged of right to the local Government, which returned, however, a portion in the shape of discretionary grants. In other Provinces, e g., the United Provinces, the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province, considerable deductions were made by the local Governments concerned from the cess for various purposes. In 1913 the Imperial Government made assignments to the local Governments concerned to enable them to hand over the entire net proceeds of the cess to the boards. The relief thus given amounted to £548,866 (R 82,33,000) a year and the provinces which benefited were Bengal, the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa, and to a smaller extent the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province. The income of district boards in Bengal, the United Provinces and Bihar and Orissa has mainly by this measure been increased by 44, 43 and 55 per cent., respectively, in the year 1913-1914. This notable expansion will enable them in future to undertake or develop many beneficent activities from which they have hitherto been debarred by lack of financial means.

The following statements show the proportions under various heads of income and expenditure of the district boards in the different Provinces for the year 1912-1913.

Taxation.

30. It was the opinion of the Commission that district boards should not be empowered to raise the land cess beyond one anna in the rupee on the rent value, as this would be an unpopular measure. Under present conditions any proposal to raise the limit imposed by the existing law, would require the previous sanction of the Government of India. Such proposals would need the most careful consideration on the merits, and the Government of India do not consider it necessary for the present to make any pronouncement on the subject.

Railway or tramway cess.

31. The Commission proposed to allow district boards to levy a special extra land cess of 3 pies in the rupee on the annual rent value of land for the construction of light railways or tramways conditional on the approval of the tax by not less than three-fourths of the members of the board. This resolution would be subject to confirmation after a period of six months by an equal majority, at a like meeting and to the sanction of the local Government. The Government of India, after consulting local Governments, have, with the sanction of the Secretary of State, empowered local Governments to undertake legislation, if they so desire, in accordance with the Commission's proposals. The scheme is to be commended from many points of view. It has an educative value by associating local self-government with responsibility for taxation for local objects and it opens up great possibilities of economic development. The actual imposition of the tax will in many instances probably not be necessary; the power to impose it, if necessary, will be sufficient for purposes of guarantee. In a few districts in Bengal the ordinary resources of district boards have proved sufficient for the construction of railways within the limits of the district. The eminently satisfactory results which have attended the construction of district board lines in the presidency of Madras encourage the Government of India to hope that the financial results of carefully selected schemes will in the course of a few years materially strengthen the financial resources of district boards which are in a position to undertake the construction or guarantee of these lines. Legislation to carry out the proposal has already been undertaken in Assam and is under consideration in the Punjab. The Government of India trust that other local Governments will take steps to confer the necessary powers on the local authorities and that selected boards throughout the country will experiment on the lines suggested.

Methods of railway construction.

32. There are two general methods by which district boards, which possess the necessary resources, may secure the construction of a railway within the limits of the district. A district board may wait until the surplus funds, which it has accumulated from the levy of a special cess or otherwise, are adequate to justify it in undertaking construction at its own cost, or it may decide to allow to a company floated for the special purpose of the construction of the proposed railway a firm guarantee on the capital paid up. In such cases in return for the guarantee, the district board will become entitled to a share of the surplus profits over a certain fixed percentage accruing from the working of the feeder railway. If the former method be adopted, it will usually be found convenient and economical to entrust the construction and working of the railway owned by the district board to the main line—whether worked by the State or by a company—with which the district board railway connects. In the latter case, the Branch Line Company receiving the district board's guarantee may itself undertake construction and working, or may arrange for construction and working through the agency of the main line. The Government of India are of opinion that when a light railway using steam locomotives is projected outside urban limits it will ordinarily be preferable to deal with the project as a railway under the Railways Act rather than as a tramway under the Tramways Act. In any event the sanction of the Railway Department is necessary in order to ensure that the project shall not conflict with others which that Department may have under their consideration, and the Railway Department will at all times, when so desired, endeavour to arrange suitable terms for construction and working on behalf of the district board, or on behalf of a Company which has received a district board guarantee. As a result of a recent reference from the Government of Madras the Government of India have decided that when a district board has accumulated a sum which, though substantial, is insufficient to meet the entire cost of a railway project which a district board desires to carry out, there is no objection to the raising of a debenture loan on the security of the railway to be constructed and the potential resources which a district board possesses through the power to continue the levy of a railway cess. For the redemption of such debentures a special sinking fund need not be accumulated. By this expedient a district board may become the owner of a district railway at a much earlier date than would formerly have been possible. A large field is thus offered for district board enterprise. This recent decision will, it is hoped, be of substantial assistance in accelerating the construction of local feeder railways outside the Imperial programme.

Budgets and financial control.

33. A further recommendation was that rural boards should be given full power to pass their budgets subject only to the maintenance of a prescribed minimum balance. The procedure recommended by the Commission is stated to be already in force in the Bombay Presidency. Other local Governments generally are not prepared to accede to this complete removal of restrictions, although some of them propose some relaxation in the existing rules. The Government of India consider that the present restrictions on the powers of the boards with regard generally to budget expenditure should be gradually relaxed with due regard to local conditions and requirements. The fact that an official is almost invariably president of a rural board and that powers of inspection and control by certain officers of Government are provided under the Acts relating to rural boards should ordinarily, in their opinion, be sufficient safeguards against gross inefficiency or mismanagement.

Estimates for public works.

34. The Commission also proposed that the existing stringent restrictions on rural boards with regard to estimates for public works should be removed. At present rural boards have to obtain outside sanction in respect to roads and other public works, the estimates of which involve any considerable amount, the limits varying for different provinces. In the opinion of the Government of India, which has the general support of local Governments, the grant to rural boards of full powers in the allotment of funds and the passing of estimates cannot, for the present at least, be conceded, but the extent of the necessary financial control might depend in the case of rural boards on the competence of the staff employed, and, where this varies, it would not be desirable to lay down hard and fast rules for the whole province. In such cases district boards might be placed in different classes according to the staff employed. The Government of India accept the view of the Commission that in districts where there are sufficient works to justify the special appointment of a trained engineer, a district board which desires to entertain such an officer and can afford to pay him an adequate salary should be permitted to do so.

Establishments.

35. The Government of India have come to the same conclusions in the case of establishments of rural boards as in the case of municipalities (paragraph 23 supra). They have recently, in their Sanitary Resolution, nos. 888-908, dated the 23rd May 1914, expressed the opinion that the appointment of well-qualified and wholetime district sanitary officers to control and organise all sanitary arrangements and experiments in the district is one of the urgent needs of the present time.

Special outside control.

36. Special powers of control over rural boards are vested in outside authorities under the existing Acts, and the Commission recommended that these should continue. The local Governments in general as well as the Government of India accept this view.

VILLAGE ORGANISATION—PANCHAYATS OR OTHER COMMITTEES.

Recommendations of the Commission.

37. The Commission recommended the constitution and development of village panchayats possessed with certain administrative powers, with jurisdiction in petty civil and criminal cases, and financed by a portion of the land cess, special grants, receipts from village cattle pounds and markets, and small fees on civil suits. This proposal, favourably commended by the Government of India, who expressed their readiness to acquiesce in some form of permissive taxation, if need be, has in general been sympathetically received. The practical difficulties are, however, felt to be very great in many parts of India. The Government of Burma and the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces deprecate the introduction of a system which, in their judgment, is alien to the customs of the people and will not command public confidence. Other Governments are willing to experiment, but on different lines. The Punjab Government has already established panchayats for civil cases only and of a voluntary character. Sir Leslie Porter, when officiating as Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces, expressed his willingness to entrust selected panchayats with criminal as well as civil jurisdiction. The Madras Government are desirous of experimenting in the establishment of panchayats but consider that action should be confined for the present to the encouragement of voluntary self-contained organisms independent of statutory sanction and consisting of village elders conferring together for common village purposes. So far as judicial functions are concerned they are content to rely on the provisions of the Madras Village Panchayats Regulation, 1816, and the Madras Village Courts Act, 1888, which authorise the assembling of panchayats and the convening of village bench courts for the settlement of particular civil suits on the application of the parties and to encourage the operation of these enactments wherever practicable. The Governments of Bengal and of Bihar and Orissa are of opinion that their existing laws sufficiently provide for the establishment of panchayats with administrative duties, while powers to dispose of criminal cases could be given under the existing Acts dealing with these matters. The Chief Commissioner of Assam has expressed his readiness to develop village government, and the Local Self-Government Bill which has recently passed the Legislative Council of that province permits the constitution of village authorities, the grant of funds by local boards and from other sources, and the delegation of minor powers of local control. The whole question has now been raised again in the discussions contained in the report of the Bengal District Administration Committee, 1913-1914.

Panchayats.

38. The Commission recognised that any policy of establishing panchayats would be the work of many years, would require great care and discretion, and much patience and judicious discrimination between the circumstances of different villages. The Government of India desire that where any practical scheme can be worked out in co-operation with the people concerned, full experiment should be made on lines approved by the local Government or Administration concerned. Throughout the greater part of India the word "panchayat" is familiar. The lower castes commonly have voluntarily constituted panchayats, to whom they allow quasi-judicial authority in social matters. The more artificial administrative committees such as chaukidari panchayats, local fund unions, and village sanitation and education committees, and, in places even village panchayats, already exist. The spread of co-operative societies and the distribution of Government advances in times of famine and scarcity on joint security are educative influences. Village tribunals for the disposal of petty civil suits have got beyond the experimental stage in some places and are in the experimental stage in others. There is, therefore, some material with which to build. The Government of India agree, however, with the view prominently brought forward by the Bengal District Administration Committee that much will depend on the local knowledge and personality of the officers who may be selected to introduce any scheme.

General principles.

39. With this general commendation, the Government of India are content to leave the matter in the hands of local Governments and Administrations. They are disposed to consider that the following general principles indicate the lines on which advance is most likely to be successful:—

(1) The experiments should be made in selected villages or areas larger than a village, where the people in general agree.

(2) Legislation, where necessary, should be permissive and general. The powers and duties of panchayats, whether administrative or judicial, need not and, indeed, should not be identical in every village.

(3) In areas where it is considered desirable to confer judicial as well as administrative functions upon panchayats the same body should exercise both functions.

(4) Existing village administrative committees, such as village sanitation and education committees, should be merged in the village panchayats where these are established.

(5) The jurisdiction of panchayats in judicial cases should ordinarily be permissive, but in order to provide inducement to litigants reasonable facilities might be allowed to persons wishing to have their cases decided by panchayats. For instance, court fees, if levied, should be small, technicalities in procedure should be avoided and possibly a speedier execution of decrees permitted.

(6) Powers of permissive taxation may be conferred on panchayats, where desired, subject to the control of the local Government or Administration, but the development of the panchayat system should not be prejudiced by an excessive association with taxation.

(7) The relations of panchayats on the administrative side with other administrative bodies should be clearly defined. If they are financed by district or sub-district boards, there can be no objection to some supervision by such boards.

PRESIDENCY CORPORATIONS AND RANGOON.

Recommendations of the Commission.

40. The Commission recommended that all the presidency corporations should be invested with the powers possessed by the Corporation of Bombay, and that the system of administration in force in that city, viz., that of a nominated official Commissioner in combination with an elected chairman, should be extended to the other towns. They also considered that the same privileges should be conferred on the Rangoon municipality in view of its population, the large future which lies before it, and the strength of its commercial community.

Bombay, Calcutta, Madras.

41. The presidency municipalities are regulated by special Acts, and their resources and powers are far greater than those of any district municipality. In Calcutta and Madras, the municipal chairman is appointed by Government. In Bombay, he is elected, but the executive administration is vested in a Commissioner nominated by Government. He is assisted by a Deputy Commissioner appointed by the corporation subject to the confirmation of Government. The Commissioner possesses wide executive powers; in some matters he must obtain the sanction of the standing committee (a statutory body, one-third of whose members are nominated by Government); in others again of the corporation. The corporation enjoys a very full discretion in the work of municipal administration; it passes its own budget, and may impose taxation within the limits of the law; and the sanction of Government is necessary only to the appointments of health officer and engineer.

The corporation of Calcutta possesses similarly wide powers. The sanction of Government is, however, required to the execution of works costing one lakh of rupees or more and to the salary of any employé drawing more than Rs. 1,000 a month, as well as to the appointments of health officer and engineer.

In Madras, the Government possess numerous powers which are not reserved to the Governments of Bengal and Bombay.

The adoption of the Bombay constitution.

42. As regards the main proposal of the Commission, the Government of Bengal were in 1909 disposed to agree with the preference expressed for the constitution of the Bombay municipality in respect of the offices of municipal Commissioner and chairman, but stated that the point would be considered hereafter, should the amendment of the Calcutta Municipal Act be undertaken. The Government of Madras agree with the corporation as to the advisability of introducing the Bombay system, and they have no objection to the general emancipation of the corporation from Government control, provided that the Municipal Commissioner is placed in a position substantially as strong as he occupies in Bombay.

43. The Government of India have accepted in the main the recommendations of the local Governments which will go far towards carrying out the proposals of the Commission. They have expressed to the Government of Madras the opinion that a free hand might be left to the corporation to impose, without the sanction of Government, any tax specifically sanctioned by the Act with regard to which maximum rates have been laid down therein. They consider that in order to provide security of tenure, the health officer, revenue officer, and engineer should not be removeable without the sanction of Government. In the case both of Calcutta and Madras, the limit of cost of works which may be undertaken without the sanction of Government will be raised to Rs. 2½ lakhs, and, with regard to Calcutta, the Government of Bengal have agreed to remove the restriction requiring the sanction of Government to salaries carrying more than Rs. 1,000 a month. The appointments of health officer and engineer will continue to require this sanction.

Rangoon

44. With regard to Rangoon, the Government of Burma is not prepared to make the concessions recommended. The circumstances of Calcutta, Madras and Rangoon are in many respects widely different, and the Government of India defer, at any rate at present, to the views of the local Government on this point. But they observe, as a general proposition, that in cities where there is a responsible public press and representation in the Provincial councils, the case for entrusting large powers and extended freedom to the municipal bodies appears to be specially strong.

Local Government Board

45. The suggestion that Government control over rural boards and municipalities should be exercised in each Province by a Local Government Board, which should contain a proportion of non-official members, was not accepted by the Commission. They considered that, since their proposals would greatly reduce the outside control exercised over the proceedings of municipal and rural boards and would provide for the delegation in large measure of such powers of guidance as are necessary to Commissioners and other local officers, no benefit would be derived from the creation of a special controlling board of this nature. The Government of India also are not prepared to support the proposal, which is not only unnecessary in the opinion of the local Governments consulted but is undesirable as tending to perpetuate the very centralisation in local affairs, which it is the object of Government to diminish.

Conclusion

46. In conclusion, the Governor-General in Council hopes that this declaration of policy may lead to steady and sound progress, without hampering local Governments and Administrations or unduly fettering local self-government. It is designed to mark a definite advance in devolution and political education. His Excellency in Council trusts that it will be interpreted in the spirit in which it is framed, a spirit of prudent boldness, calculating risks but not afraid to take them in the cause of progress.

Ploughing of land for jute and for early and late rice continues and their sowing has commenced in places. Planting of sugarcane has begun. The price of common rice shows a tendency to rise. Cattle disease is reported from five districts.

Bengal.—Rain fell generally throughout the Province. It has facilitated ploughing operations and the sowing of autumn crops and has been favourable to standing crops. More rain is wanted for autumn paddy and jute. Damage to boro paddy and mango crop by hailstorm has been reported from Murshidabad and Malda. Cattle disease is reported from ten districts. The average price of common rice has risen by 0·6 per cent as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light rain fell in parts of Chota Nagpur and Orissa. There was practically no rain in Bihar. Harvesting and threshing of spring crops and preparation of lands for the next season continue. Sowing of jute and autumn paddy is going on in some districts. Standing crops and vegetables are on the whole doing well. The average price of common rice has risen as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Extra spring crops are being sown in the western districts. The area sown is normal. Sowings of sugarcane and cotton continue and are generally average. Cattle are healthy and fodder and water for drinking and irrigation are sufficient. Prices are either stationary or are falling slightly but they still range between warning and scarcity rates. Prices of wheat :—Ambala 8¾, Ferozepore and Lahore 8½ and Rawalpindi and Lyallpur 9 seers per rupee.

HISTORICAL RECORD OF THE IMPERIAL VISIT TO INDIA, 1911.

This book, which has been compiled by the Government of India from the official records, contains a complete and authoritative account of the proceedings connected with the visit of Their Imperial Majesties to India and with the Coronation Durbar of December 1911, including lists of the persons taking part in all the various celebrations and ceremonies at which Their Imperial Majesties were present, as well as a large number of illustrations, portraits of Ruling Princes and others, coloured Persian and Sanscrit texts, maps, plans, etc.

The book has been published by Mr. John Murray, Albemarle Street, London, W., and copies are now procurable from all the principal booksellers.

There are two editions—a popular one in a cloth binding, price Rs. 7-8-0, and a very limited edition de luxe, price Rs. 250, which has been subscribed for. As the popular edition is strictly limited, and a considerable portion of it has been absorbed in requisitions already received and in the requirements of libraries, schools, etc., it will probably be exhausted very soon after publication. Those who have not yet ordered copies but require them are therefore advised to order at an early date. Application should be made to the Superintendent, Government Printing, India, Calcutta.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING MARCH 1915

The outstanding feature of the trade returns for March, as compared with those of its immediate predecessor, is that there is an increase in total imports (R43 lakhs), which is more than compensated by a fall in total exports (R1,03 lakhs) and in re-exports (R4 lakhs). The increase under imports is largely due to the increase of R62 lakhs in cotton piecegoods—grey unbleached, set off by a fall of R20 lakhs under sugar 16 D. S. and above, and the decrease (R1,03 lakhs) under exports is accounted for by tea and gunny cloth each R37 lakhs, hides and skins, tanned R19 lakhs, and indigo R13 lakhs. As compared with March 1914 there is a decrease of 40 per cent in exports and 39 per cent in imports. The total trade of March 1915 amounted to R23,39 lakhs, imports accounting for R9,34 lakhs, exports for R13,74 lakhs and re-exports for R31 lakhs.

A Decrease in Imports of Mineral Oil, Coal, and Silk Raw.

Imports of Food, Drink, and Tobacco are almost of the same value as in March 1914. In the Imports of raw materials, there is a decrease of R48 lakhs, of which mineral oil accounted for R32½ lakhs, coal, coke, and patent fuel for R6¾ lakhs, and silk raw for R5¼ lakhs.

A Decrease in Imports of Manufactured Articles.

Imports of Manufactured articles show declines in almost all the principal groups, except slight increases in Arms, ammunition, etc., and Chemicals. The important decreases are: Hardware (—R19 lakhs), Glass and Glassware (—R8 lakhs), Textile machinery (—R19 lakhs), Iron and Steel (—R1,13 lakhs), other metals (—R32 lakhs), Railway plant and rolling-stock (—R49 lakhs), Cotton grey piecegoods (—R47 lakhs), White piecegoods (—R75 lakhs), and Coloured piecegoods (—R[illegible] lakhs).

Smaller Exports of Grain.

As regards exports, Food, Drink, and Tobacco decreased by R3,17 lakhs, mainly accounted for by smaller shipments of Grain, Pulse and Flour, principally Rice not in the husk, which declined from 9·9 million cwts, valued at R5 crores to 4·2 million cwts, valued at nearly R2 crores. There were no shipments to Russia, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Austria-Hungary and Roumania. Wheat increased by R4 lakhs, but this was due almost entirely to an increase in value as the quantity exported was about the same as in March 1914.

Heavy Exports of Tea to Russia.

Shipments of Tea were more than double the amount shipped in March 1914, the total quantity rising from 4 million lbs. to 9½ million lbs.: Russia is almost entirely responsible for the increase.

Decline in the Value of Exports of Seeds, Cotton raw, and Jute raw.

Exports of raw materials declined by R5,56 lakhs, accounted for by R1,76 lakhs in seeds, R2,46 lakhs in raw cotton and only R72 lakhs in raw Jute* and R55 lakhs in Hides and skins, raw.

Exports of Manufactured Articles.

The exports of manufactured articles declined by R48 lakhs, Cotton twist and yarn falling by R51 lakhs, which was partly set off by an increase of R11 lakhs under Hides and skins, tanned or dressed.

* There was an increase in the quantity of jute exported, see p. 6

The following diagrams illustrate the relative magnitude of the import and export trade in merchandise for March 1915 and 1914 and February 1915 :—

The noticeable increases, during the year, were in Petroleum (R15 lakhs), due to the heavy imports of American oil, and in silver (R55 lakhs), the imports of which were stimulated by low prices. The most important decreases occurred under sugar (R48 lakhs), manufactured articles (R16 lakhs), cotton goods (R59 lakhs), metals (R24 lakhs), liquors (R12 lakhs), and chemicals, drugs, etc. (R5 lakhs). The total customs revenue for the year 1914-15, excluding salt but including excise duty on cotton goods and land customs, is R9,53 lakhs as against R11,33 lakhs for the corresponding period of last year.

PATENTS and DESIGNS.

Calcutta, the 8th May 1915.

INDIAN PATENTS AND DESIGNS (TEMPORARY) RULES, 1915.

In exercise of the powers conferred by Sections 3 and 4 of the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Governor General in Council is pleased to make the following rules:—

1. These rules may be called the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915.

2. The Controller of Patents and Designs may, on the application of any person, and subject to such terms and conditions, if any, as he thinks fit, order the avoidance or suspension, in whole or in part, of any patent or license and of the registration of any design, and of all or any right in a registered design, the person entitled to the benefit of which is a subject of any State at war with His Majesty, and the Controller before granting any such application may require to be satisfied—

(a) that the person entitled to such benefit is the subject of a State at war with His Majesty;

(b) that the person applying intends to manufacture, or cause to be manufactured, the patented article; or to carry on, or cause to be carried on, the patented process; or to manufacture, or cause to be manufactured, the goods or any of them, in respect of which the design is registered;

(c) that it is in the general interest of the country, or of a section of the community, or of a trade, that such avoidance or suspension should be ordered.

3. The fee to be paid on any such application shall be R20.

4. The application shall be filed with the Controller of Patents and Designs, who shall notify any person whose name appears on the Registers of Patents or Designs as having an interest and shall appoint a date for hearing the application. The application and the date of the hearing shall be notified in the Gazette of India. The applicant shall produce evidence at the hearing to satisfy the Controller in respect of (a), (b) and (c) of Rule 2 and that he himself is not a subject of any State at war with His Majesty. The patentee, or proprietor of the design, or any [illegible] interested, may appear at the hearing in opposition to the application, provided that the notice of his intention is given to the Controller at the Patent Office before the date of hearing.

5. In any case in which the Controller makes an Order under these rules avoiding or suspending in whole or in part, a patent or license, or avoiding or suspending the registration, and all or any rights conferred by the registration, of any design, the Controller may in his discretion grant in favour of any person or persons other than the subject of any State at war with His Majesty, licenses to make, sell or use, the patented invention or registered design so avoided or suspended, upon such terms and conditions, and either for the whole term of the patent or registration of the design, or for such less period, as the Controller may think fit.

6. The decision of the Controller shall be subject to appeal to the Governor General in Council.

7. The Governor General in Council may at any time, in his absolute discretion, revoke or vary any avoidance or suspension or license ordered under these rules.

8. The Controller may avoid or suspend any proceedings on any application made under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, by a subject of any State at war with His Majesty.

9. The Controller may extend any time prescribed by the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, for doing any act or filing any document upon such terms and subject to such conditions as he may think fit—

(a) where it is shown to his satisfaction that the applicant, patentee or proprietor, as the case may be, was prevented from doing the said act or filing the said document, by reason of active service or enforced absence from this country, or any other circumstances arising from the present state of war, which, in the opinion of the Controller, would justify such extension;

(b) where the doing of any act would, by reason of the circumstances arising from the present state of war, be prejudicial or injurious to the rights or interests of any applicant, patentee or proprietor, as aforesaid.

10. Save as otherwise provided in these rules, the procedure prescribed by the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, and the rules made thereunder shall, so far as the same can be made applicable, apply to all proceedings taken under these rules.

11. These rules shall apply to any exclusive privilege acquired under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888, as if such exclusive privilege had been a patent granted under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

HISTORICAL RECORD OF THE IMPERIAL VISIT TO INDIA, 1911.

This book, which has been compiled by the Government of India from the official records, contains a complete and authoritative account of the proceedings connected with the visit of Their Imperial Majesties to India and with the Coronation Durbar of December 1911, including lists of the persons taking part in all the various celebrations and ceremonies at which Their Imperial Majesties were present, as well as a large number of illustrations, portraits of Ruling Princes and others, coloured Persian and Sanscrit texts, maps, plans, etc.

The book has been published by Mr. John Murray, Albemarle Street, London, W., and copies are now procurable from all the principal booksellers.

There are two editions—a popular one in a cloth binding, price Rs. 7-8-0, and a very limited edition de luxe, price Rs. 250, which has been subscribed for. As the popular edition is strictly limited, and a considerable portion of it has been absorbed in requisitions already received and in the requirements of libraries, schools, etc., it will probably be exhausted very soon after publication. Those who have not yet ordered copies but require them are therefore advised to order at an early date. Application should be made to the Superintendent, Government Printing, India, Calcutta.

THE PATENT OFFICE.

PATENTS and DESIGNS.

Calcutta, the 15th May 1915.

INDIAN PATENTS AND DESIGNS (TEMPORARY) RULES, 1915.

In exercise of the powers conferred by Sections 3 and 4 of the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Governor General in Council is pleased to make the following rules:—

1. These rules may be called the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915.

2. The Controller of Patents and Designs may, on the application of any person, and subject to such terms and conditions, if any, as he thinks fit, order the avoidance or suspension, in whole or in part, of any patent or license and of the registration of any design, and of all or any right in a registered design, the person entitled to the benefit of which is a subject of any State at war with His Majesty, and the Controller before granting any such application may require to be satisfied—

(a) that the person entitled to such benefit is the subject of a State at war with His Majesty;

(b) that the person applying intends to manufacture, or cause to be manufactured, the patented article; or to carry on, or cause to be carried on, the patented process; or to manufacture, or cause to be manufactured, the goods or any of them, in respect of which the design is registered;

(c) that it is in the general interest of the country, or of a section of the community, or of a trade, that such avoidance or suspension should be ordered.

3. The fee to be paid on any such application shall be R20.

4. The application shall be filed with the Controller of Patents and Designs, who shall notify any person whose name appears on the Registers of Patents or Designs as having an interest and shall appoint a date for hearing the application. The application and the date of the hearing shall be notified in the Gazette of India. The applicant shall produce evidence at the hearing to satisfy the Controller in respect of (a), (b) and (c) of Rule 2 and that he himself is not a subject of any State at war with His Majesty. The patentee, or proprietor of the design, or any one interested, may appear at the hearing in opposition to the application, provided that the notice of his intention is given to the Controller at the Patent Office before the date of hearing.

5. In any case in which the Controller makes an Order under these rules avoiding or suspending in whole or in part, a patent or license, or avoiding or suspending the registration, and all or any rights conferred by the registration, of any design, the Controller may in his discretion grant in favour of any person or persons other than the subject of any State at war with His Majesty, licenses to make, sell or use, the patented invention or registered design so avoided or suspended, upon such terms and conditions, and either for the whole term of the patent or registration of the design, or for such less period, as the Controller may think fit.

6. The decision of the Controller shall be subject to appeal to the Governor General in Council.

7. The Governor General in Council may at any time, in his absolute discretion, revoke or vary any avoidance or suspension or license ordered under these rules.

8. The Controller may avoid or suspend any proceedings on any application made under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, by a subject of any State at war with His Majesty.

9. The Controller may extend any time prescribed by the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, for doing any act or filing any document upon such terms and subject to such conditions as he may think fit—

(a) where it is shown to his satisfaction that the applicant, patentee or proprietor, as the case may be, was prevented from doing the said act or filing the said document, by reason of active service or enforced absence from this country, or any other circumstances arising from the present state of war, which, in the opinion of the Controller, would justify such extension;

(b) where the doing of any act would, by reason of the circumstances arising from the present state of war, be prejudicial or injurious to the rights or interests of any applicant, patentee or proprietor, as aforesaid.

10. Save as otherwise provided in these rules, the procedure prescribed by the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, and the rules made thereunder shall, so far as the same can be made applicable, apply to all proceedings taken under these rules.

11. These rules shall apply to any exclusive privilege acquired under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888, as if such exclusive privilege had been a patent granted under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) should be addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911 (price 10 annas), and in the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912 (price 2 annas). These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs nor their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India applications should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

HISTORICAL RECORD OF THE IMPERIAL VISIT TO INDIA, 1911.

This book, which has been compiled by the Government of India from the official records, contains a complete and authoritative account of the proceedings connected with the visit of Their Imperial Majesties to India and with the Coronation Durbar of December 1911, including lists of the persons taking part in all the various celebrations and ceremonies at which Their Imperial Majesties were present, as well as a large number of illustrations, portraits of Ruling Princes and others, coloured Persian and Sanscrit texts, maps, plans, etc.

The book has been published by Mr. John Murray, Albemarle Street, London, W., and copies are now procurable from all the principal booksellers.

There are two editions—a popular one in a cloth binding, price Rs. 7-8-0, and a very limited edition de luxe, price Rs. 250, which has been subscribed for. As the popular edition is strictly limited, and a considerable portion of it has been absorbed in requisitions already received and in the requirements of libraries, schools, etc., it will probably be exhausted very soon after publication. Those who have not yet ordered copies but require them are therefore advised to order at an early date. Application should be made to the Superintendent, Government Printing, India, Calcutta.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hours on Thursday, the 13th May 1915, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. The storm which was forming in the Bay at the close of the previous week apparently advanced northwards to the neighbourhood of the coast between Akyab and Chittagong, but disappeared without passing inland. It initiated a strong flow of humid winds into Burma and northeast India, which lasted throughout the week, and heavy rain fell in Burma and parts of Bengal and of Assam. In the rest of the country the only rainfall reported was associated with thunderstorms, and was local in character.

2. Burma.—Rainfall was nearly general, except in Tenasserim, throughout the week.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—There was nearly general rain in Assam on the 8th, 9th and 11th, in south Bengal and Orissa on the 6th and 12th, in Bengal, excluding the southeastern districts, on the 11th and in Chota Nagpur on the 6th and 11th. Local falls occurred in Bihar.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Thundershowers were reported from a few stations.

Northwest India.—A few thunderstorms occurred in the Punjab and east Rajputana.

The Peninsula.—There were a few falls of rain associated with thunderstorms, chiefly in south Madras and on the north Madras coast.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 8th May 1915.

Burma.—The rainfall throughout the week was general and heavy. Harvesting of island crops has been almost completed. Ploughing for groundnut, sesamum and cotton has become general in Upper Burma. Standing crops are in good condition. The health of cattle is satisfactory. The price of unhusked rice has risen to Rs. 104 per 100 baskets but is still slightly below normal. The market for white rice is firm.

Assam.—Slight to heavy rain fell in all districts. More rain is wanted for early rice in Cachar. Plucking and manufacture of tea continue. Prospects are generally good. Ploughing of land for and sowing of rice and jute and planting of sugarcane are in progress. Harvesting of spring rice in Sylhet continues. The price of common rice is stationary. Cattle disease is reported in six districts.

Bengal.—General rain fell throughout the Province. The fall was heavy in Cooch Behar and in parts of Jessore, Darjeeling and Mymensingh but light to moderate elsewhere. It has done much good to standing crops and has also facilitated ploughing of fields and sowing of autumn crops. Cattle disease is reported from seventeen districts. The average price of common rice has risen by about 0·6 per cent as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light to moderate rain was general over the Province. Ploughing of lands and sowing of autumn crops continue and have been facilitated by the recent rain. Harvesting and threshing of spring crops have been completed. The standing sugarcane crop is doing well. The average price of common rice has risen as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from fifteen districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—Rain has fallen throughout the Provinces to the benefit of sugarcane everywhere. It has done slight injury to extra crops and to grains on threshing floors in a few districts. Threshing and winnowing of spring crops are approaching completion. Weighments of opium are in progress. Indigo, cotton, juar and early rice are being sown. Deficiency of water is reported from Jhansi. Otherwise food, fodder and water are ample everywhere. The condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory but sporadic cattle disease is still reported from some villages in a few districts. Markets are adequately stocked although juar and bajra which are varieties of millets are not obtainable in many places. Prices of food grains generally show a tendency to fall. They show very slight rise in some districts probably owing to unseasonable rainfall.

Punjab.—Light rain has fallen in parts of the south-east and west. Reaping and threshing of wheat and other spring crops continue except in the south-east where they have been completed. The yield is normal to good. Sowings of extra spring crops have been nearly finished and those of sugarcane and cotton are in progress and are generally normal. The condition and prospects of extra spring crops are good. Cattle are healthy. Fodder and water for drinking and irrigation are sufficient. Prices of wheat and other spring cereals are falling and generally range between normal and warning rates, while prices of other grains are stationary and range between warning and scarcity rates or are above scarcity rates Prices of wheat :—Rawalpindi and Lyallpur 10, Amballa 10¼ and Ferozepore and Lahore 11 seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Slight rain has fallen in Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan. The weather is clear and hot. Standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated areas are fairly good. Sowings of extra spring crops in Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan and of autumn crops in Bannu and Peshawar continue. Harvesting of spring crops is in progress with outturn fairly good. The condition of cattle is good. Fodder and water are procurable. Prices are high but are falling in the case of wheat and maize in Peshawar and and in the case of gram in Dera Ismail Khan.

Jammu.—Slight rain fell during the week. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 9 to 13½ and maize from 10 to 18 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is good. There is no cattle disease. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—No rain fell during the week. Spring crops are in good condition. Agricultural operations for autumn crops are in progress. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are normal except in Baramula where they are high. Fodder and water are sufficient.

Rajputana.—The weather is hot. Slight showers are reported from Ajmer-Merwara and from southern, eastern and central Rajputana. The maximum fall of rain was 109 cents in Kotah. Land is being prepared for autumn crops. Prospects are normal. The condition of cattle is good. Fodder and water are sufficient. Prices are stationary.

Central India.—The rainfall was general in Gwalior, partial in Bhopal, slight in Indore and in the Southern States and nil elsewhere. Threshing and winnowing of spring crops are in progress in Gwalior and in the Southern States and have been nearly completed in Bhopal and Baghelkhand. Preparation of land for autumn crops is in progress in Indore, Malwa and in the Southern States. Harvesting of wheat and watering of sugarcane continue in Malwa. The probable outturn is good. Agricultural stock is good except in the Agar tahsil of Gwalior, in the Indore, Mhow, Sanwer and Rampura parganas of Indore and in the Beohari tahsil of Rewa where cattle disease prevails. The fodder supply is sufficient throughout. Prices are rising in Gwalior and Baghelkhand, are falling in Bhopal and Malwa, are slightly fluctuating in Indore city and in Indore district and are steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—The weather continues hot, cloudy and stormy. Thirteen districts received light showers nowhere exceeding 63 cents. Threshing and winnowing of spring crops still continue in parts of the Jubbulpore and Nerbudda divisions. The construction of field embankments and preparation of land for the ensuing season's crops are in progress. Fodder and water are generally sufficient. Cattle are in good condition. Juar is dearer by 2½ seers per rupee in Buldana. Other fluctuations in prices are unimportant.

Feudatory States.—Nine States received rain ranging from 25 cents to 2¼ inches. Preparation of land for next sowings is in progress. Variations in prices are unimportant.

Bombay.—Rain fell during the week in Thar and Parkar, Ahmedabad, Kanara, the Deccan, the Karnatak and Kolhapur. Cotton picking continues in Ahmedabad, Surat, Baroda and Cutch. Preparation of land for the cultivation of autumn crops is progressing. The fodder supply is sufficient except in two mahals of Karachi, two talukas of Thar and Parkar, one taluka of Nawabshah and one taluka of Hyderabad. Cattle are in good condition. Agricultural stock is sufficient except in parts of Poona. Drinking water is adequate. Water for irrigation is generally sufficient. Prices are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—Slight rain was received during the week except in the Bir and Bidar districts. The average fall was 18 cents. The late rice crop is being harvested. Lands are being prepared in most parts for the sowing of autumn crops. Cattle disease prevails in four talukas. Water scarcity is reported from the Gulbarga taluka and fodder scarcity from the Kalamnuri taluka of the Parbhani district. Prices of grains are almost constant. The highest price in districts is juar 11½ seers in Bidar and Warangal and the lowest 22 seers in Bir, Gulbarga and Adilabad.

Mysore.—The rainfall was fair in the Bangalore and Mysore districts and light elsewhere. The price of ragi has risen in Hassan and Chitaldrug and fallen in Shimoga. Markets are well supplied. The outturn of the harvested sugarcane, paddy and cotton is fair. Gingelly, ragi, paddy and sugarcane have been sown in parts. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects of the season are generally good. Cattle are healthy except in parts. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Ploughing for rice continues. Prices of food grains are high. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was heavy in Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Coimbatore, Trichinopoly, Tanjore, Pudukottai and Malabar, nil in Banganapalle and Madras and fair to light elsewhere. Standing crops are fair to good. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding normally. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water-supply is sufficient except in Guntur, Kurnool and Trichinopoly and in parts of Ganjam, Godavari, the Deccan, Nellore, South Arcot, the central parts, the west coast and the southern districts except Tinnevelly. Pasture is sufficient except in Guntur, the Deccan, Coimbatore and the west coast and in parts of six other districts. Fodder is sufficient. Prices are steady.

EXCISE.

RESOLUTION.

Dated Simla, the 10th May 1915.

In pursuance of the recommendation comprised in the third Resolution of the International Opium Commission, which met at Shanghai in 1909, the Government of India, in the orders specified in the margin,* urged upon the various Local Governments and Administrations the desirability of imposing some further enhancement on the sale price of opium, while abolishing, as far as possible, differences between the issue prices in force in the various provinces and in different parts of the same province. The object which they had in view was to raise the price of the drug in all provinces sufficiently high to make its consumption a luxury, and to ensure such uniformity in the prices in contiguous areas administered from different centres as to minimise the risk of smuggling from areas in which the issue rates are low to those in which they are high.

*Resolution in the Finance Department No. 533-F. E., dated the 19th August 1912, paragraph 7.
Circular letter in the Finance Department No. 534-F. E., dated the 19th August 1912.

2. The appended statement summarises the action which has since been taken on these suggestions by the various provincial Governments. It shows that in the majority of provinces a substantial enhancement of the issue price of excise opium has been effected. In the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province, where other kinds of opium are consumed, a similar enhancement of the duties on such opium has also been made. Although the ideal of inter-provincial uniformity in prices has not yet been attained, a distinct advance has been made in this direction.

3. The Government of India regard these results as of considerable practical importance, and trust that the general principles laid down in the orders of 1912 will continue to be borne in mind by the Local Governments and Administrations concerned in their future management of the excise on opium.

ORDERED that a copy of the foregoing Resolution be communicated to all Local Governments and Administrations and published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

C. E. LOW,

Secretary to the Government of India.

Fourth Supplement dated the 13th April 1915, to the "London Gazette" of the 9th April 1915.

Admiralty,

13th April 1915.

The following despatch has been received from Rear-Admiral the Hon. Horace L. A. Hood, C.B., M.V.O., D.S.O., reporting the proceedings of the flotilla off the coast of Belgium between 17th October and 9th November 1914:—

Office of Rear-Admiral,

Dover Patrol,

11th November 1914.

Sir,—I have the honour to report the proceedings of the flotilla acting off the coast of Belgium, between October 17th and November 9th.

The flotilla was organised to prevent the movement of large bodies of German troops along the coast roads from Ostend to Nieuport, to support the left flank of the Belgian Army, and to prevent any movement by sea of the enemy's troops.

Operations commenced during the night of October 17th, when the "Attentive," flying my flag, accompanied by the monitors "Severn," "Humber," and "Mersey," the light cruiser "Foresight," and several torpedo-boat destroyers, arrived and anchored off Nieuport Pier.

Early on the morning of the 18th October information was received that German infantry were advancing on Westende village, and that a battery was in action at Westende Bains. The flotilla at once proceeded up past Westende and Middlekirke to draw the fire and endeavour to silence the guns.

A brisk shrapnel fire was opened from the shore, which was immediately replied to, and this commenced the naval operations on the coast which continued for more than three weeks without intermission.

During the first week the enemy's troops were endeavouring to push forward along the coast roads, and a large accumulation of transport existed within reach of the naval guns.

On October 18th machine guns from the "Severn" were landed at Nieuport to assist in the defence, and Lieutenant E. S. Wise fell, gallantly leading his men.

The "Amazon," flying my flag, was badly holed on the waterline and was sent to England for repairs, and during these early days most of the vessels suffered casualties, chiefly from shrapnel shell from the field guns of the enemy.

The presence of the ships on the coast soon caused alterations in the enemy's plans, less and less of their troops were seen, while more and more heavy guns were gradually mounted among the sand dunes that fringe the coast.

It soon became evident that more and heavier guns were required in the flotilla. The Scouts therefore returned to England, while H. M. S. "Venerable" and several older cruisers, sloops and gunboats arrived to carry on the operations.

Five French torpedo-boat destroyers were placed under my orders by Admiral Favereau, and on the 30th October I had the honour of hoisting my flag in the "Intrepide," and leading the French flotilla into action off Lombartzyde. The greatest harmony and enthusiasm existed between the allied flotillas.

As the heavier guns of the enemy came into play it was inevitable that the casualties of the flotilla increased, the most important being the disablement of the 6-inch turret and several shots on the waterline of the "Mersey," the death of the Commanding Officer and eight men and the disablement of 16 others in the "Falcon," which vessel came under a heavy fire when guarding the "Venerable" against submarine attack; the "Wildfire" and "Vestal" were badly holed, and a number of casualties caused in the "Brilliant" and "Rinaldo."

Enemy submarines were seen and torpedoes were fired, and during the latter part of the operations the work of the torpedo craft was chiefly confined to the protection of the larger ships.

It gradually became apparent that the rush of the enemy along the coast had been checked, that the operations were developing into a trench warfare, and that the work of the flotilla had for the moment, ceased.

The arrival of allied reinforcements and the inundation of the country surrounding Nieuport rendered the further presence of the ships unnecessary.

The work of the squadron was much facilitated by the efforts of Colonel Bridges, attached to the Belgian Headquarters, and to him I am greatly indebted for his constant and unfailing support.

I would like especially to bring to your notice :—

Capitaine de fregate Richard, of the "Dunois," Senior Officer of the French flotilla, whose courtesy and gallantry assisted to make the operations a success.

Captain C. D. Johnson, M.V.O., in charge of 6th Destroyer Flotilla.

Commander Eric J. A. Fullerton, in command of the monitors, whose ships were constantly engaged in the inshore fighting.

Commander A. D. M. Cherry, of the "Vestal," who commanded the sloops, which were constantly engaged for the whole period. He remained in command of the flotilla after my departure on 7th November, and continued the bombardment on 8th November, returning to England the next day.

Commander H. C. Halahan, of the "Bustard," whose gunboat was constantly in action close to the shore.

Commander A. L. Snagge, of the "Humber."

Commander H. G. L. Oliphant, of the "Amazon."

Lieutenant-Commander R. A. Wilson, of the "Mersey."

Lieutenant-Commander G. L. D. Gibbs, of the "Crusader," in which ship my flag was hoisted during most of the operations.

Lieutenant-Commander J. B. Adams, R. N. R., on my staff.

Lieutenant H. O. Wauton, of the "Falcon," who maintained his position in a heavy fire on the look-out for submarines, and was unfortunately killed.

Lieutenant H. O. Joyce, of the "Vestal," who was badly wounded by a shell, but rallied his men to attend to the wounded, and then got his gun again into action.

Sub-Lieutenant C. J. H. DuBoulay, of the "Falcon," who took command of his ship after the Captain and 24 men were killed and wounded.

Petty-Officer Robert Chappell, O.N. 207788, of the "Falcon," who, though both legs were shattered and he was dying, continued to try and assist in the tending of the wounded. He shortly afterwards died of his wounds.

Petty-Officer Fredk. William Motteram, of the "Falcon," O.N. 183216, for immediate attention to the wounded under fire on 28th October.

Able Seaman Ernest Dimmock, of the "Falcon," O. N. 204549, who directly the casualties occurred in "Falcon," finding himself the only person unwounded on went immediately to the helm and conned the ship.

Herbert Edward Sturman, of the "Mersey," Boy, 1st class O.N.J. 24887, who, when wounded by shrapnel, continued to serve the guns.

Leading Seaman John Thos. Knott, O.N.J. 1186, of the "Brilliant," who, when all men at his gun being killed or wounded, and himself severely wounded, endeavoured to fight his gun.

Supplement dated the 14th April 1915, to the "London Gazette" of the 13th April 1915.

From—The Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, The British Army in the Field,

To—The Secretary of State for War, War Office, London, S. W.

General Headquarters,

5th April, 1915.

MY LORD,

I have the honour to report the operations of the Forces under my command since the date of my last despatch, 2nd February 1915.

1. The event of chief interest and importance which has taken place is the victory achieved over the enemy at the Battle of Neuve Chapelle, which was fought on the 10th, 11th and 12th of March. The main attack was delivered by troops of the First Army under the command of General Sir Douglas Haig, supported by a large force of Heavy Artillery, a Division of Cavalry and some Infantry of the general reserve.

Secondary and holding attacks and demonstrations were made along the front of the Second Army under the direction of its Commander, General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien.

Whilst the success attained was due to the magnificent bearing and indomitable courage displayed by the troops of the 4th and Indian Corps, I consider that the able and skilful dispositions which were made by the General Officer Commanding, First Army, contributed largely to the defeat of the enemy and to the capture of his position. The energy and vigour with which General Sir Douglas Haig handled his command show him to be a leader of great ability and power.

Another action of considerable importance was brought about by a surprise attack of the Germans made on the 14th March against the 27th Division holding the trenches east of St. Eloi. A large force of artillery was concentrated in this area under cover of mist, and a heavy volume of fire was suddenly brought to bear on the trenches at 5 P. M. This artillery attack was accompanied by two mine explosions ; and, in the confusion caused by these and the suddenness of the attack, the position of St. Eloi was captured and held for some hours by the enemy.

Well directed and vigorous counter-attacks, in which the troops of the 5th Army Corps showed great bravery and determination, restored the situation by the evening of the 15th.

A more detailed account of these operations will appear in subsequent pages of this despatch.

2. On the 6th February a brilliant action by troops of the 1st Corps materially improved our position in the area south of the La Bassée Canal. During the previous night parties of Irish Guards and of the 3rd Battalion Coldstream Guards had succeeded in gaining ground whence converging fire could be directed on the flanks and rear of certain "brickstacks" occupied by the Germans, which had been for some time a source of considerable annoyance.

At 2 P. M. the affairs commenced with a severe bombardment of the "brickstacks" and the enemy's trenches. A brisk attack by the 3rd Coldstream Guards and Irish Guards from our trenches west of the "brickstacks" followed, and was supported by fire from the flanking positions which had been seized the previous night by the same regiments. The attack succeeded, the "brickstacks" were occupied without difficulty, and a line established north and south through a point about forty yards east of the "brickstacks."

The casualties suffered by the 5th Corps throughout the period under review, and particularly during the month of February, have been heavier than those in other parts of the line. I regret this; but I do not think, taking all the circumstances into consideration, that they were unduly numerous. The position then occupied by the 5th Corps has always been a very vulnerable part of our line ; the ground is marshy, and trenches are most difficult to construct and maintain. The 27th and 28th Divisions of the 5th Corps have had no previous experience of European warfare, and a number of the units composing it had only recently returned from service in tropical climates. In consequence, the hardships of a rigorous winter campaign fell with greater weight upon these Divisions than upon any other in the command.

Chiefly owing to these causes, the 5th Corps, up to the beginning of March, was constantly engaged in counter-attack to retake trenches and ground which had been lost.

In their difficult and arduous task, however, the troops displayed the utmost gallantry and devotion; and it is most creditable to the skill and energy of their leaders that I am able to report how well they have surmounted all their difficulties, that the ground first taken over by them is still intact, and held with little greater loss than is incurred by troops in all other parts of the line.

On the 14th February the 82nd Brigade of the 27th Division was driven from its trenches east of St. Eloi; but by 7 A. M. on the 15th all these trenches had been recaptured, fifteen prisoners taken, and sixty German dead counted in front of the trenches. Similarly in the 28th Division trenches were lost by the 85th Brigade and retaken the following night.

During the month of February the enemy made several attempts to get through all along the line, but he was invariably repulsed with loss. A particularly vigorous attempt was made on the 17th February against the trenches held by the Indian Corps, but it was brilliantly repulsed.

On February 28th a successful minor attack was made on the enemy's trenches near St. Eloi by small parties of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. The attack was divided into three small groups, the whole under the command of Lieutenant Crabbe: No. 1 Group under Lieutenant Papineau, No. 2 Group under Serjeant Patterson, and No. 3 Group under Company Serjeant-Major Lloyd.

The head of the party got within fifteen or twenty yards of the German trench and charged; it was dark at the time (about 5-15 A. M.).

Lieutenant Crabbe, who showed the greatest dash and élan, took his party over everything in the trench until they had gone down it about eighty yards, when they were stopped by a barricade of sandbags and timber. This party, as well as the others, then pulled down the front face of the German parapet. A number of Germans were killed and wounded, and a few prisoners were taken.

The services performed by this distinguished corps have continued to be very valuable since I had occasion to refer to them in my last despatch. They have been most ably organised, trained and commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel F. D. Farquhar, D.S.O., who, I deeply regret to say, was killed while superintending some trench work on the 20th March. His loss will be deeply felt.

A very gallant attack was made by the 4th Battalion of the King's Royal Rifle Corps of the 80th Brigade on the enemy's trenches in the early hours of March 2nd. The Battalion was led by Major Widdrington, who launched it at 12-30 A. M. (he himself being wounded during its progress), covered by an extremely accurate and effective artillery fire. About sixty yards of the enemy's trench were cleared, but the attack was brought to a standstill by a very strong barricade, in attempting to storm which several casualties were incurred.

8. During the month of February I arranged with General Foch to render the 9th French Corps, holding the trenches on my left, some much-needed rest by sending the three Divisions of the British Cavalry Corps to hold a portion of the French trenches, each division for a period of ten days alternately.

It was very gratifying to me to note once again in this campaign the eager readiness which the Cavalry displayed to undertake a rôle which does not properly belong to them in order to support and assist their French comrades.

In carrying out this work leaders, officers and men displayed the same skill and energy which I have had reason to comment upon in former despatches.

The time passed by the Cavalry in the French trenches was, on the whole, quiet and uneventful, but there are one or two incidents calling for remark.

At about 1-45 A. M. on 16th February a half-hearted attack was made against the right of the line held by the 2nd Cavalry Division, but it was easily repulsed by rifle fire, and the enemy left several dead in front of the trenches. The attack was delivered against the second and third trenches from the right of the line of this Division.

At 6 A. M. on the 21st the enemy blew up one of the 2nd Cavalry Division trenches, held by the 16th Lancers, and some adjoining French trenches. The enemy occupied forty yards of our trench and tried to advance, but were stopped. An immediate counter-attack by the supporting squadron was stopped by machine-gun fire. The line was established opposite the gap, and a counter-attack by two squadrons and one company of French reserve was ordered. At 5-30 P.M. 2nd Cavalry Division reported that the counter-attack did not succeed in retaking the trench blown in, but that a new line had been established forty yards in rear of it, and that there was no further activity on the part of the enemy. At 10 P. M. the situation was unchanged.

The Commander of the Indian Cavalry Corps expressed a strong desire that the troops under his command should gain some experience in trench warfare. Arrangements were made, therefore, with the General Officer Commanding the Indian Corps, in pursuance of which the various units of the Indian Cavalry Corps have from time to time taken a turn in the trenches, and have thereby gained some valuable experience.

4. About the end of February many vital considerations induced me to believe that a vigorous offensive movement by the Forces under my command should be planned and carried out at the earliest possible moment.

Amongst the more important reasons which convinced me of this necessity were:—The general aspect of the Allied situation throughout Europe, and particularly the marked success of the Russian Army in repelling the violent onslaughts ot Marshal Von Hindenburg; the apparant weakening of the enemy in my front, and the necessity for assisting our Russian Allies to the utmost by holding as many hostile troops as possible in the Western Theatre; the efforts to this end which were being made by the French Forces at Arras and Champagne; and, perhaps the most weighty consideration of all, the need of fostering the offensive spirit in the troops under my command after the trying and possibly enervating experiences which they had gone through of a severe winter in the trenches.

In a former despatch I commented upon the difficulties and drawbacks which the winter weather in this climate imposes upon a vigorous offensive. Early in March those difficulties became greatly lessened by the drying up of the country and by spells of brighter weather.

I do not propose in this despatch to enter at length into the considerations which actuated me in deciding upon the plan, time and place of my attack, but Your Lordship is fully aware of these

As mentioned above, the main attack was carried out by units of the First Army, supported by troops of the Second Army and the general reserve.

The object of the main attack was to be the capture of the village of Neuve Chapelle and the enemy's position at that point, and the establishment of our line as far forward as possible to the east of that place.

The object, nature and scope of the attack, and instructions for the conduct of the operation were communicated by me to Sir Douglas Haig in a secret memorandum dated 19th February.

The main topographical feature of this part of the theatre is a marked ridge which runs south-west from a point two miles south-west of Lille to the village of Fournes, whence two spurs run out, one due west to a height known as Haut Pommereau, the other following the line of the main road to Illies.

The buildings of the village of Neuve Chapelle run along the Rue du Bois-Fauquisart Road. There is a triangle of roads just north of the village. This area consists of a few big houses, with walls, gardens, orchards, etc., and here, with the aid of numerous machine guns, the enemy had established a strong post which flanked the approaches to the village.

The Bois du Biez, which lies roughly south-east of the village of Neuve Chapelle, influenced the course of this operation.

Full instructions as to assisting and supporting the attack were issued to the Second Army.

The battle opened at 7-30 A.M. on the 10th March by a powerful artillery bombardment of the enemy's position at Neuve Chapelle. The artillery bombardment had been well prepared and was most effective, except on the extreme northern portion of the front of attack.

At 8-5 A.M. the 23rd (left) and 25th (right) Brigades of the 8th Division assaulted the German trenches on the north west of the village.

At the same hour the Garhwal Brigade of the Meerut Division, which occupied the position to the south of Neuve Chapelle, assaulted the German trenches in its front.

The Garhwal Brigade and the 25th Brigade carried the enemy's lines of entrenchments where the wire entanglements had been almost entirely swept away by our sharpnel fire. The 23rd Brigade, however, on the north-east, was held up by the wire entanglements, which were not sufficiently cut.

At 8-5 A M. the artillery turned on to Neuve Chapelle, and at 8-35 A M. the advance of the infantry was continued.

The 25th and Garhwal Brigades pushed on eastward and north-eastward, respectively, and succeeded in getting a footing in the village. The 23rd Brigade was still held up in front of the enemy's wire entanglements, and could not progress. Heavy losses were suffered, especially in the Middlesex Regiment and the Scottish Rifles. The progress, however, of the 25th Brigade into Neuve Chapelle immediately to the south of the 23rd Brigade had the effect of turning the southern flank of the enemy's defences in front of the 23rd Brigade.

This fact, combined with powerfull artillery support, enabled the 23rd Brigade to get forward between 10 and 11 A.M., and by 11 A.M. the whole of the village of Neuve Chapelle and the roads leading northward and south-westward from the eastern end of that village were in our hands.

During this time our artillery completely cut off the village and the surrounding country from any German reinforcements which could be thrown into the fight to restore the situation by means of a curtain of shrapnel fire. Prisoners subsequently reported that all attempts at reinforcing the front line were checked.

Steps were at once taken to consolidate the position won.

Considerable delay occurred after the capture of the Neuve Chapelle position. The infantry was greatly disorganised by the violent nature of the attack and by its passage through the enemy's trenches and the buildings of the village. It was necessary to get units to some extent together before pushing on. The telephonic communication being cut by the enemy's fire rendered communication between front and rear most difficult. The fact of the left of the 23rd Brigade having been held up had kept back the 8th Division, and had involved a portion of the 25th Brigade in fighting to the north out of its proper direction of advance. All this required adjustment. An orchard held by the enemy north of Neuve Chapelle also threatened the flank of an advance towards the Aubers Ridge.

I am of opinion that this delay would not have occurred had the clearly expressed order of the General Officer Commanding First Army been more carefully observed.

The difficulties above enumerated might have been overcome at an earlier period of the day if the General Officer Commanding 4th Corps had been able to bring his reserve brigades more speedily into action.

As it was, the further advance did not commence before 3-30 P.M.

The 21st Brigade was able to form up in the open on the left without a shot being fired at it, thus showing that at the time the enemy's resistance had been paralysed. The Brigade pushed forward in the direction of Moulin Du Pietre.

At first it made good progress, but was subsequently held up by the machine-gun fire from the houses and from a defended work in the line of the German entrenchments opposite the right of the 22nd Brigade.

Further to the south the 24th Brigade, which had been directed on Pietre, was similarly held up by machine-guns in the houses and trenches at the road junction six hundred yards north-west of Pietre.

The 25th Brigade, on the right of the 24th, was also held up by machine-guns from a bridge held by the Germans, over the River Des Layes, which is situated to the north-west of the Bois Du Biez.

Whilst two Brigades of the Meerut Division were establishing themselves on the new line, the Dehra Dun Brigade, supported by the Jullundur Brigade of the Lahore Division, moved to the attack of the Bois Du Biez, but were held up on the line of the River Des Layes by the German post at the bridge which enfiladed them and brought them to a standstill.

The defended bridge over the River Des Layes and its neighbourhood immediately assumed considerable importance. Whilst artillery fire was brought to bear, as far as circumstances would permit, on this point, Sir Douglas Haig directed the 1st Corps to despatch one or more battalions of the 1st Brigade in support of the troops attacking the Bridge. Three battalions were thus sent to Richebourg St. Vaast. Darkness coming on, and the enemy having brought up reinforcements, no further progress could be made, and the Indian Corps and 4th Corps proceeded to consolidate the position they had gained.

Whilst the operations which I have thus briefly recorded were going on, the 1st Corps, in accordance with orders, delivered an attack in the morning from Givenchy, simultaneously with that against Neuve Chapelle; but, as the enemy's wire was insufficiently cut, very little progress could be made, and the troops at this point did little more than hold fast the Germans in front of them.

On the following day, March 11th, the attack was renewed by the 4th and Indian Corps, but it was soon seen that a further advance would be impossible until the artillery had dealt effectively with the various houses and defended localities which held up the troops along the entire front. Efforts were made to direct the artillery fire accordingly; but owing to the weather conditions, which did not permit of aerial observation, and the fact that nearly all the telephonic communications between the artillery observers and their batteries had been cut, it was impossible to do so with sufficient accuracy. Even when our troops which were pressing forward occupied a house here and there, it was not possible to stop our artillery fire, and the infantry had to be withdrawn.

The two principal points which barred the advance were the same as on the preceding day—namely, the enemy's position about Moulin de Pietre and at the bridge over the River Des Layes.

On the 12th March the same unfavourable conditions as regards weather prevailed, and hampered artillery action.

Although the 4th and Indian Corps most gallantly attempted to capture the strongly fortified positions in their front, they were unable to maintain themselves, although they succeeded in holding them for some hours.

Operations on this day were chiefly remarkable for the violent counter-attacks, supported by artillery, which were delivered by the Germans, and the ease with which they were repulsed.

As most of the objects for which the operations had been undertaken had been attained and as there were reasons why I considered it inadvisable to continue the attack at that time, I directed Sir Douglas Haig on the night of the 12th to hold and consolidate the ground which had been gained by the 4th and Indian Corps, and to suspend further offensive operations for the present.

On the morning of the 12th I informed the General Officer Commanding 1st Army that he could call on the 2nd Cavalry Division, under General Gough, for immediate support in the event of the successes of the First Army opening up opportunities for its favourable employment. This Division and a Brigade of the North Midland Division, which was temporarily attached to it, was moved forward for this purpose.

The 5th Cavalry Brigade, under Sir Philip Chetwode, reached the Rue Bacquerot at 4 P.M. with a view to rendering immediate support; but he was informed by the General Officer Commanding 4th Corps that the situation was not so favourable as he had hoped it would be and that no further action by the cavalry was advisable.

General Gough's command, therefore, retired to Estaires.

The artillery of all kinds was handled with the utmost energy and skill, and rendered invaluable support in the prosecution of the attack.

The losses during these three days' fighting were, I regret to say, very severe, numbering—190 officers and 2,337 other ranks, killed.
359 officers and 8,174 other ranks, wounded. 23 officers and 1,728 other ranks, missing.
But the results attained were, in my opinion, wide and far reaching.

The enemy left several thousand dead on the battlefield which were seen and counted; and we have positive information that upwards of 12,000 wounded were removed to the north-east and east by train.

Thirty officers and 1,657 other ranks of the enemy were captured.

I can best express my estimate of this battle by quoting an extract from a Special Order of the Day which I addressed to Sir Douglas Haig and the First Army at its conclusion:—

> "I am anxious to express to you personally my warmest appreciation of the skilful manner in which you have carried out your orders, and my fervent and most heartfelt appreciation of the magnificent gallantry and devoted, tenacious courage displayed by all ranks whom you have ably led to success and victory."

5. Some operations in the nature of holding attacks, carried out by troops of the Second Army, were instrumental in keeping the enemy in front of them occupied, and preventing re-inforcements being sent from those portions of the front to the main point of attack.

At 12-30 A. M. on the 12th March the 17th Infanty Brigade of the 4th Division, 3rd Corps, engaged in an attack on the enemy which resulted in the capture of the village of L'Epinette and adjacent farms.

Supported by a brisk fire from the 18th Infantry Brigade, the 17th Infantry Brigade, detailed for the attack assaulted in two columns converging, and obtained the first houses of the village without much loss. The remainder of the village was very heavily wired, and the enemy got away by means of communication trenches while our men were cutting through the wire.

The enemy suffered considerable loss; our casualties being 5 officers and 30 other ranks, killed and wounded.

The result of this operation was that an advance of 300 yards was made on a front of half a mile.

All attempts to retake this position have been repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy.

The General Officer Commanding the Second Corps arranged for an attack on a part of the enemy's position to the south-west of the village of Wytschaete which he had timed to commence at 10 A. M. on the 12th March. Owing to dense fog, the assault could not be made until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

It was then commenced by the Wiltshire and Worcestershire Regiments, but was so hampered by the mist and the approach of darkness that nothing more was effected than holding the enemy to his ground.

The action of St. Eloi referred to in the first paragraph of this despatch commenced at 5 P. M. on the 14th March by a very heavy cannonade which was directed against our trenches in front of St. Eloi, the village itself and the approaches to it. There is a large mound lying to the south-east of the village. When the artillery attack was at its height a mine was exploded under this mound, and a strong hostile infantry attack was immediately launched against the trenches and the mound.

Our artillery opened fire at once, as well as our infantry, and inflicted considerable losses on the enemy during their advance; but, chiefly owing to the explosion of the mine and the surprise of the overwhelming artillery attack, the enemy's infantry had penetrated the first line of trenches at some points. As a consequence the garrisons of other works which had successfully resisted the assault were enfiladed and forced to retire just before it turned dark.

A counter-attack was at once organised by the General Officer Commanding, 82nd Brigade, under the orders of the General Officer Commanding, 27th Division, who brought up a reserve brigade to support it.

The attack was launched at 2 A. M. and the 82nd Brigade succeeded in recapturing the portion of the village of St. Eloi which was in the hands of the enemy and a portion of the trenches east of it. At 3 A. M. the 80th Brigade in support took more trenches to the east and west of the village.

The counter attack, which was well carried out under difficult conditions, resulted in the recapture of all lost ground of material importance.

It is satisfactory to be able to record that, though the troops occupying the first line of trenches were at first overwhelmed, they afterwards behaved very gallantly in the counter-attack for the recovery of the lost ground; and the following units earned and received the special commendation of the Army Commander:—The 2nd Royal Irish Fusiliers, the 2nd Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, the 1st Leinster Regiment, the 4th Rifle Brigade and the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

A vigorous attack made by the enemy on the 17th to recapture these trenches was repulsed with great loss

Throughout the period under review night enterprises by smaller or larger patrols, which were led with consummate skill and daring, have been very active along the whole line.

A moral superiority has thus been established, and valuable information has been collected.

I cannot speak too highly of the invincible courage and the remarkable resource displayed by these patrols.

The troops of the 3rd Corps have particularly impressed me by their conduct of these operations.

6 The work of the Royal Flying Corps throughout this period, and specially during the operations of the 10th, 11th, and 12th March, was of the greatest value. Though the weather on March 10th and on the subsequent days was very unfavourable for aerial work, on account of low-lying clouds and mist, a remarkable number of hours flying of a most valuable character were effected, and continuous and close reconnaissance was maintained over the enemy's front.

In addition to the work of reconnaissance and observation of artillery fire, the Royal Flying Corps was charged with the special duty of hampering the enemy's movements by destroying various points on his communications. The railways at Menin, Courtrai, Don and Douai were attacked, and it is known that very extensive damage was effected at certain of these places. Part of a troop train was hit by a bomb, a wireless installation near Lille is believed to have been effectively destroyed, and a house in which the enemy had installed one of his Headquarters was set on fire. These afford other instances of successful operations of this character. Most of the objectives mentioned were attacked at a height of only 100 to 150 feet. In one case the pilot descended to about 50 feet above the point he was attacking.

Certain new and important forms of activity, which it is undesirable to specify, have been initiated and pushed forward with much vigour and success.

There have been only eight days during the period under review on which reconnaissances have not been made. A total of approximately 130,000 miles have been flown—almost entirely over the enemy's lines.

No great activity has been shown over our troops on the part of the enemy's aircraft, but they have been attacked whenever and wherever met with, and usually forced down or made to seek refuge in their own lines.

7. In my last despatch I referred to the remarkable promptitude and rapidity with which reinforcements arrived in this country from England. In connection with this it is of interest to call attention to the fact that, in spite of the heavy casualties incurred in the fighting between the 10th and 15th March, all deficiencies, both in officers and rank and file, were made good within a few days of the conclusion of the battle.

The drafts for the Indian Contingents have much improved of late, and are now quite satisfactory.

Since the date of my last report the general health of the Army has been excellent; enteric has decreased, and there has been no recurrence on any appreciable scale of the "foot" trouble which appeared so threatening in December and January.

These results are due to the skill and energy which have characterised in a marked degree the work of the Royal Army Medical Corps throughout the campaign, under the able supervision of Surgeon-General T. J. O'Donnell, D.S.O., Deputy Director-General, Medical Services. But much credit is also due to Divisional, Brigade, Regimental and Company Commanders for the close supervision which has been kept over the health of their men by seeing that the precautions laid down for the troops before entering and after leaving the trenches are duly observed, and by the establishment and efficient maintenance of bathing-places and wash-houses, and by the ingenious means universally employed throughout the Forces to maintain the cleanliness of the men, having regard both to their bodies and their clothing.

I have inspected most of these houses and establishments, and consider them models of careful organisation and supervision.

I would particularly comment upon the energy displayed by the Royal Army Medical Corps in the scientific efforts they have made to discover and check disease in its earliest stages by a system of experimental research, which I think has never before been so fully developed in the field.

In this work they have been ably assisted by those distinguished members of the medical profession who are now employed as Military Medical Officers, and whose invaluable services I gratefully acknowledge.

The actual strength of the Force in the field has been increased and the health of the troops improved by a system of "convalescent" hospitals.

In these establishments slight wounds and minor ailments are treated, and men requiring attention and rest are received.

By these means efficient soldiers, whose services would otherwise be lost for a long time, are kept in the country, whilst a large number of men are given immediate relief and rest when they require it without removing them from the area of operations.

This adds materially to the fighting efficiency of the Forces.

The principal convalescent hospital is at St. Omer. It was started and organised by Colonel A.F.L. Bate, Army Medical Service, whose zeal, energy and organising power have rendered it a model hospital of its kind, and this example has materially assisted in the efficient organisation of similar smaller establishments at every Divisional Headquarters.

8. I have already commented upon the number and severity of the casualties in action which have occurred in the period under report. Here once again I have to draw attention to the excellent work done by Surgeon-General O'Donnell and his officers. No organisation could excel the efficiency of the arrangements—whether in regard to time, space, care and comfort, or transport—which are made for the speedy evacuation of the wounded.

I wish particularly to express my deep sense of the loss incurred by the Army in General, and by the Forces in France in particular, in the death of Brigadier-General J. E. Gough, V.C., C.M.G., A.D.C., late Brigadier-General, General Staff, First Army, which occurred on 22nd February as a result of a severe wound received on the 20th February when inspecting the trenches of the 4th Corps.

I always regarded General Gough as one of our most promising military leaders of the future. His services as a Staff Officer throughout the campaign have been invaluable, and I had already brought his name before Your Lordship for immediate promotion.

I can well understand how deeply these casualties are felt by the nation at large, but each daily report shows clearly that they are being endured on at least an equal scale by all the combatants engaged throughout Europe, friends and foes alike.

In war as it is to-day between civilised nations, armed to the teeth with the present deadly rifle and machine-gun, heavy casualties are absolutely unavoidable. For the slightest undue exposure the heaviest toll is exacted.

The power of defence conferred by modern weapons is the main cause of the long duration of the battles of the present day, and it is this fact which mainly accounts for such loss and waste of life.

Both one and the other can, however, be shortened and lessened if attacks can be supported by the most efficient and powerful force of artillery available; but an almost unlimited supply of ammunition is necessary and a most liberal discretionary power as to its use must be given to the Artillery Commanders.

I am confident that this is the only means by which great results can be obtained with a minimum of loss.

9. On the 15th February the Canadian Division began to arrive in this country. I inspected the Division, which was under the command of Lieutenant-General E. A. H. Alderson, C.B., on 20th February.

They presented a splendid and most soldier-like appearance on parade. The men were of good physique, hard and fit. I judged by what I saw of them that they were well trained, and quite able to take their places in the line of battle.

Since then the Division has thoroughly justified the good opinion I formed of it.

The troops of the Canadian Division were first attached for a few days by brigades for training in the 3rd Corps trenches under Lieutenant-General Sir William Pulteney, who gave me such an excellent report of their efficiency that I was able to employ them in the trenches early in March.

During the Battle of Neuve Chapelle they held a part of the line allotted to the First Army, and, although they were not actually engaged in the main attack, they rendered valuable help by keeping the enemy actively employed in front of their trenches.

All the soldiers of Canada serving in the Army under my command have so far splendidly upheld the traditions of the Empire, and will, I feel sure, prove to be a great source of additional strength to the forces in this country.

In former despatches I have been able to comment very favourably upon the conduct and bearing of the Territorial Forces throughout the operations in which they have been engaged.

As time goes on, and I see more and more of their work, whether in the trenches or engaged in more active operations, I am still further impressed with their value.

Several battalions were engaged in the most critical moments of the heavy fighting which occurred in the middle of March, and they acquitted themselves with the utmost credit.

Up till lately the troops of the Territorial Force in this country were only employed by battalions, but for some weeks past I have seen formed divisions working together, and I have every hope that their employment in the larger units will prove as successful as in the smaller.

These opinions are fully borne out by the result of the close inspection which I have recently made of the North Midland Division, under Major-General Hon. Montagu Stuart-Wortley, and the 2nd London Division, under Major-General Barter.

10. General Baron Von Kaulbars, of the Russian General Staff, arrived at my headquarters on the 18th March. He was anxious to study our aviation system, and I gave him every opportunity of doing so.

The Bishop of London arrived here with his Chaplain on Saturday, March 27th, and left on Monday, April 5th.

During the course of his visit to the Army His Lordship was at the front every day, and I think I am right in saying that there was scarcely a unit in the command which was not at one time or another present at his services or addresses.

Personal fatigue and even danger were completely ignored by His Lordship. The Bishop held several services virtually under shell fire, and it was with difficulty that he could be prevented from carrying on his Ministrations under rifle fire in the trenches.

I am anxious to place on record my deep sense of the good effect produced throughout the Army by this self sacrificing devotion on the part of the Bishop of London, to whom I feel personally very deeply indebted.

I have once more to remark upon the devotion to duty, courage and contempt of danger which has characterised the work of the Chaplains of the Army throughout this campaign.

11. The increased strength of the Force and the gradual exhaustion of the local resources have necessitated a corresponding increase in our demands on the Line of Communications. since we are now compelled to import many articles which in the early stages could be obtained by local purchase. The Directorates concerned have, however, been carefully watching the situation, and all the Administrative Services on the Line of Communications have continued to work with smoothness and regularity, in spite of the increased pressure thrown upon them. In this connection I wish to bring to notice the good service which has been rendered by the Staff of the Base Ports.

The work of the Railway Transport Department has been excellently carried out, and I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the valuable service rendered by the French railway authorities generally, and especially by Colonel Ragueneau, late Directeur des Chemins de Fer, Lieutenant-Colonel Le Hénaff, Directeur des Chemins de Fer, Lieutenant-Colonel Dumont, Commissaire Militaire, Chemin de Fer du Nord, and Lieutenant-Colonel Frid, Commissaire Regulateur, Armée Anglaise.

The Army Postal Service has continued to work well, and at the present time a letter posted in London is delivered at General Headquarters or the Headquarters of the Armies and Army Corps on the following evening, and reaches an addressee in the trenches on the second day after posting. The delivery of parcels has also been accelerated, and is carried out with regularity and despatch.

12. His Majesty the King of the Belgians visited the British lines on February 8th and inspected some of the units in reserve behind the trenches.

During the last two months I have been much indebted to His Majesty and his gallant Army for valuable assistance and co-operation in various ways.

13. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales is the bearer of this despatch.

His Royal Highness continues to make most satisfactory progress. During the Battle of Neuve Chapelle he acted on my General Staff as a Liaison Officer. Reports from the General Officers Commanding Corps and Divisions to which he has been attached agree in commending the thoroughness in which he performs any work entrusted to him.

I have myself been very favourably impressed by the quickness with which His Royal Highness has acquired knowledge of the various branches of the service, and the deep interest he has always displayed in the comfort and welfare of the men.

His visits to the troops, both in the field and in hospitals, have been greatly appreciated by all ranks.

His Royal Highness did duty for a time in the trenches with the Battalion to which he belongs.

14. In connection with the Battle of Neuve Chapelle I desire to bring to Your Lordship's special notice the valuable services of General Sir Douglas Haig, K.C.B., K.C.I.E., K.C.V.O., A.D.C., Commanding the First Army.

I am also much indebted to the able and devoted assistance I have received from Lieutenant-General Sir William Robertson, K.C.B., K.C.V.O., D.S.O., Chief of the General Staff, in the direction of all the operations recorded in this despatch.

I have many other names to bring to notice for valuable, gallant and distinguished service during the period under review, and these will form the subject of a separate report at an early date.

I have the honour to be,

Your Lordship's most obedient Servant,

J. D. P. FRENCH,

Commanding-in-Chief,

HISTORICAL RECORD OF THE IMPERIAL VISIT TO INDIA, 1911.

This book, which has been compiled by the Government of India from the official records, contains a complete and authoritative account of the proceedings connected with the visit of Their Imperial Majesties to India and with the Coronation Durbar of December 1911, including lists of the persons taking part in all the various celebrations and ceremonies at which Their Imperial Majesties were present, as well as a large number of illustrations, portraits of Ruling Princes and others, coloured Persian and Sanscrit texts, maps, plans, etc.

The book has been published by Mr. John Murray, Albemarle Street, London, W., and copies are now procurable from all the principal booksellers.

There are two editions—a popular one in a cloth binding, price Rs. 7-8-0, and a very limited edition de luxe, price Rs. 250, which has been subscribed for. As the popular edition is strictly limited, and a considerable portion of it has been absorbed in requisitions already received and in the requirements of libraries, schools, etc., it will probably be exhausted very soon after publication. Those who have not yet ordered copies but require them are therefore advised to order at an early date. Application should be made to the Superintendent, Government Printing, India, Calcutta.

Advance in Food Imports.

Compared with April 1914, the imports of food stuffs advanced by R17 lakhs in value mainly due to sugar (+ R21½ lakhs). The increase in sugar was due partly to an increase in value of sugar, 16 D. S. and above,* and partly to heavy imports of sugar, 15 D. S. and below, from Mauritius.

A Decrease in Imports of Coal, and Mineral Oil.

Imports of raw materials showed a decrease of R20 lakhs, of which mineral oil accounted for R8 lakhs and coal, coke and patent fuel R12½ lakhs, partly set off by an increase of R3½ lakhs in silk, raw.

A Decrease in Imports of Manufactured Articles.

Imports of manufactured articles showed declines in almost all the principal groups but slight increases in drugs and medicines, cement, and matches. The important decreases are : hardware (—R10 lakhs), glass and glassware (—R9 lakhs), textile machinery (—R15 lakhs), iron and steel-sheets and plates (—R43 lakhs), railway materials for construction (—R21 lakhs), cotton yarn (—R26 lakhs), grey piecegoods (—R49 lakhs), white piecegoods (—R57 lakhs) and coloured piecegoods (—R84 lakhs).

Smaller exports of Grain.

Exports of Food, drink, and tobacco declined by R136 lakhs, grain, pulse, and flour being responsible for R137 lakhs and coffee for R14 lakhs partly set off by an increase of R15 lakhs in the exports of spices—pepper. Rice not in the husk declined from 5·6 million cwts valued at R3 crores, to 3·1 million cwts, valued at R1·6 crores. As in the last month there were no shipments of rice to the continental countries in Europe except some 30,000 cwts to Sweden and 202,650 cwts to France. The value of the shipments of wheat increased by R5·5 lakhs, the quantity showing an increase of 31,578 cwts only.

Smaller exports of Cotton, raw and Seeds.

Exports of raw materials showed a marked decline of R583 lakhs, all the principal groups sharing in the decline. Cotton, raw declined from 1,308,000 cwts, valued at R487 lakhs, to 978,000 cwts, valued at R230 lakhs. The decline of R67 lakhs in the exports of jute, raw was due entirely to a decrease in value, as the quantity shipped rose from 42,234 tons to 44,991 tons. Seeds declined by R182 lakhs and hides and skins, raw by R40 lakhs.

* There was a decrease in the quantity of sugar, 16 D. S. and above imported, see p. 4.

SMALLER EXPORTS OF JUTE GOODS.

The exports of manufactured articles declined by R96 lakhs, due mainly to reduced shipments of jute bags and cloth. Jute bags declined from 43 millions in number, valued at R125 lakhs, to 36 millions, valued at R97 lakhs, and jute cloth from 103 million yards, valued at R143 lakhs, to 80 million yards, valued at R 96 lakhs. Hides and skins, tanned or dressed, and leather also declined by R11 lakhs.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN SELECTED ARTICLES IN FEBRUARY 1915.

The object of the tables below is to show the quantities of the principal staples of agricultural produce imported from the various provinces, etc., and from foreign countries into the ports of Calcutta, Bombay, Karachi, and the Madras ports during the month of February 1915, and for the eleven months April 1914 to February 1915, as compared with the corresponding periods of 1914. The statistics include foreign seaborne and coasting trade as well as inland (rail and riverborne) trade. They have been furnished by Collectors of Customs, Steamer Companies, Railway Audit Officers, the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta, etc.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN FEBRUARY 1914 AND 1915.

It will be seen from Table I, that the imports by rail, river and sea in February 1915, as against the corresponding month of 1914 show (in round numbers) a fall of—

54 per cent in linseed
(6,100 tons as against 13,400 tons last year.)
24 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(27,400 tons as against 36,300 tons last year.)
22 per cent in raw cotton
(89,900 tons as against 111,800 tons last year.)
16 per cent in rape and mustard seed.
(12,000 tons as against 14,400 tons last year.)
6 per cent in rice
(185,900 tons as against 198 700 tons last year.)
1 per cent in gram and pulse.
(27,100 tons as against 27,100 tons last year.)

The imports of jute by rail, river and sea into Calcutta show an increase of 81 per cent (85,900 tons as against [illegible]7,400 tons last year) due to larger receipts from Assam, Bengal and Bihar and Orissa. The increase of 76 per cent (2,500 tons as against 1,400 tons last year) in the imports of tea is due mainly to larger exports from Assam and Bengal.

It will be seen from Table III (wheat excluding wheat flour) that the principal sources of the imports in February 1914 were (in order of importance) the Punjab, Rajputana and Central India, Central Provinces and Berar, while during the corresponding month of 1915 Punjab sent by far the largest quantity, viz., 45 per cent of the total. The total imports of wheat (excluding wheat flour) into these chief ports in February 1915 were less than those of February 1914 by 8,867 tons, and the total imports for eleven months, April to February 1915, were less than those for the corresponding period of the previous year by 509,691 tons. Table X shows the exports out of India of wheat (including wheat flour) month by month during the last four years.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN FEBRUARY 1915 AS COMPARED WITH THE PREVIOUS MONTH.

As compared with January 1915, the imports in February 1915 into the ports referred to above show (in round numbers) an increase of—

53 per cent. in linseed
(6,100 tons as against 4,000 tons previous month.)
43 per cent in rice.
(185 900 tons as against 129,800 tons previous month.)
43 per cent in rape and mustard seed.
(12,000 tons as against 8,100 tons previous month.)
27 per cent in raw cotton.
(89,900 tons as against 70,700 tons previous month.)
8 per cent in gram and pulse
(27,100 tons as against 25,200 tons previous month.)

and a decrease of—

[illegible]8 per cent in tea.
(2,500 tons as against 6,600 tons previous month.)
38 per cent in jute.
(85,900 tons as against 138,200 tons previous month)
9 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour).
(27,400 tons as against 30,200 tons previous month.)

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN ELEVEN MONTHS ENDING FEBRUARY 1914 AND 1915.

Table I shows an increase in the eleven months' figures of two articles only, namely, tea (20·6 per cent) and rice (2·9 per cent). Other articles show a decrease, viz., 37 per cent in linseed, 33 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour), 30 per cent in rape and mustard seed, 27 per cent in jute, 26 per cent in gram and pulse and 24 per cent in raw cotton.

Exports of linseed from upcountry to the chief ports from Bengal fell off by 10 thousands of tons, from the United Provinces by 40 thousands, from Rajputana and Central India by 65 thousands, from the Central Provinces and Berar by 40 thousands and from the Nizam's Territory by 20 thousands. The despatches of wheat (excluding wheat flour) from the United Provinces decreased by 2½ lakhs of tons, from Rajputana and Central India by 1 lakh and 35 thousands and from the Central Provinces and Berar by 2 lakhs. Bihar and Orissa despatched 20 thousands, the United Provinces 55 thousands and Rajputana and Central India 10 thousands of tons less of rape and mustard seed. The exports of jute to Calcutta from Assam, Bengal and Bihar and Orissa showed a decrease of 15 thousands, 2 lakhs and 35 thousands and 20 thousands of tons respectively. The despatches of gram and pulse to ports from Bengal fell off by 10 thousands of tons, from the United Provinces by 75 thousands, from the Punjab by 15 thousands, from Rajputana and Central India by 10 thousands and from the Central Provinces and Berar by 15 thousands. The United Provinces despatched 30 thousands, the Punjab 50 thousands, Rajputana and Central India 10 thousands, Bombay 30 thousands, the Central Provinces and Berar 35 thousands, the Nizam's Territory 10 thousands and Madras 5 thousands of tons less of cotton, raw, than in the corresponding period of last year.

The statistics for February 1915, as also for the eleven months ending 28th February 1915, are summarised below :—

1. Rainfall continued widespread in Burma, Assam and Bengal during the first two days of the week, but it then decreased considerably and on the remaining days occurred chiefly in Assam and north Bengal. Weather was unsettled in the extreme north on the 22nd and 23rd, and light rain fell in Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province and the north Punjab. In the Peninsula dry weather prevailed up to the 25th, when nearly general rain fell in the southwestern districts. At the close of the week there were indications on the Malabar coast of the appearance of unsettled weather over the south Arabian Sea, such as is usually associated with a preliminary advance of the monsoon.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 22nd May 1915.

Burma.—The rainfall during the week was general. Ploughing for winter rice in Lower Burma and for upland crops in Upper Burma is proceeding. Sowing of early sesamum and cotton is progressing and that of autumn rice has commenced. The health of live stock is satisfactory. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon is easier and is Rs. 109 per hundred baskets. The market for white rice is somewhat unsettled owing to the uncertainty regarding the effect of restrictions on exports.

Assam.—The weather is rainy. Moderate to heavy rain fell in all districts interfering in several districts with the sowing and weeding of paddy and jute. Plucking and manufacture of tea continue. HISTORICAL RECORD OF THE IMPERIAL VISIT TO INDIA, 1911.

This book, which has been compiled by the Government of India from the official records, contains a complete and authoritative account of the proceedings connected with the visit of Their Imperial Majesties to India and with the Coronation Durbar of December 1911, including lists of the persons taking part in all the various celebrations and ceremonies at which Their Imperial Majesties were present, as well as a large number of illustrations, portraits of Ruling Princes and others, coloured Persian and Sanscrit texts, maps, plans, etc.

The book has been published by Mr. John Murray, Albemarle Street, London, W., and copies are now procurable from all the principal booksellers.

There are two editions—a popular one in a cloth binding, price Rs. 7-8-0, and a very limited edition de luxe, price Rs. 250, which has been subscribed for. As the popular edition is strictly limited, and a considerable portion of it has been absorbed in requisitions already received and in the requirements of libraries, schools, etc., it will probably be exhausted very soon after publication. Those who have not yet ordered copies but require them are therefore advised to order at an early date. Application should be made to the Superintendent, Government Printing, India, Calcutta.

No. 525.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to sanction the following admissions to the Military Division of the Indian Order of Merit :—

For admission to the 2nd Class of the Order.

(a) No. 2131 Sepoy Dasunda Singh, 89th Punjabis, for conspicuous gallantry in the operations on the Suez Canal on the 3rd February 1915. He brought up ammunition under a heavy fire and each time on the return journey carried back a wounded man to the ambulance which was some 800 to 1,000 yards in rear. He also carried Sepoy Hakim Singh, who was killed, and Sepoy Sucha Singh, who was wounded, from the firing line, removing his boots in order to perform the journeys quicker.

(b) No. 1753 Havildar Muhammad Azim, 92nd Punjabis, for conspicuous gallantry near Serapeum in operations on the Suez Canal on the 4th February 1915. He was wounded in the side when close to the trench of the enemy, who had made signs of surrender and apparently treacherously fired on the company he was with. He remained with his section though wounded and when his company took up a position to re-engage the enemy he kept his men steady under a hot fire and directed their fire with coolness and pluck. He was present at the final surrender of the enemy and marched back with the prisoners to camp, refusing any attention to his wound until he arrived there.

(c) No. 279 Naick Safdar Ali (killed) and No. 1878 Sepoy Sher Khan, 62nd Punjabis, for conspicuous bravery in the action near Tussum in the Suez Canal operations on the 3rd February 1915. These two men led their comrades down a steep sandy bank practically to the water level, under a particularly hot fire, to charge the enemy who were landing from a boat. Sepoy Sher Khan was severely wounded 6 yards from the boat. In the final advance to the boat Naick Safdar Ali was again in advance of his comrades and was hit one yard from the water's edge. He died a few minutes later. The widow (if any) of Naick Safdar Ali is admitted to the pension of the 2nd Class of the Order with effect from the date of his death.

(d) No. 1775 Naick Mihan Singh, 92nd Punjabis, for conspicuous gallantry as Tussum in the operations on the Suez Canal on the 3rd February 1915, when his company moved out to counter-attack some of the enemy in a trench close to the post. Naick Mihan Singh, alone, worked his way to a point whence he shot and killed one of a group of the enemy who were firing on and had wounded some of his company, the remainder of the group rushing back to their trench. On being joined by other men of his squad he kept up a fire on the enemy in the trench and enabled his company to get to a point from which they could enfilade the trench, after which the enemy surrendered. During the remainder of the day's fighting Naick Mihan Singh led his squad with coolness and pluck.

(e) Jemadar Indar Singh, and No. 3397 Havildar Ganda Singh, } 128th Pioneers, for gallant conduct and good work at Tussum on the 3rd February 1915 in the operations on the Suez Canal. When Lieutenant Fitzgibbon who commanded a platoon was killed, the command of the platoon devolved upon Jemadar Indar Singh who continued the fight until relieved by the 2nd Rajputs. Jemadar Indar Singh and Havildar Ganda Singh behaved gallantly in charging a number of the enemy who had landed with fixed bayonets.

(f) No. 805 Rifleman Joglal Rai (died of wounds), 2nd Battalion, 10th Gurkha Rifles, for conspicuous bravery on the 3rd February 1915 in the operations on the Suez Canal, in responding to a call for volunteers to carry a message along the firing line to 2nd Lieutenant Scott. Rifleman Joglal Rai ran along the firing line with the message and was wounded twice before he delivered it to 2nd Lieutenant Scott who had him attended to. This rifleman showed great pluck in remaining in the firing line after he was wounded and until the order was received to retire when he went back with the company. He had to be ordered to go to hospital and died of his wound six days later.

His widow (if any) is admitted to the pension of the 2nd Class of the Order with effect from the date of his death.

(g) No. 726 Havildar (now Jemadar) Suba Singh, 56th Punjabi Rifles (Frontier Force), for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, when in command of a patrol of nine men on the Suez Canal on the 22nd March 1915. Havildar Suba Singh surprised and engaged a strong raiding party of Turks estimated at 400, under German officers, and in the fight that ensued he showed a determined front and fought with great gallantry. Although severely wounded, Havildar Suba Singh continued to lead and encourage his men and extricated his patrol from a very difficult situation with a loss of two killed and three wounded, whilst the losses to the enemy were estimated at 12 killed and 15 wounded.

No. 526.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to sanction the following admissions to the Military Division of the Indian Order of Merit:—

For admission to the 2nd Class of the Order.

(a) Subadar Bakhtawar Singh, 13th Rajputs (The Shekhawati Regiment), for gallant behaviour in the action at Tanga on the 3rd November 1914. Although severely wounded, he continued to rally his men and to cover the retirement.

(b) No. 1222 Sepoy Fazil Khan, 101st Grenadiers, for gallant behaviour in the action at Tanga on the 3rd November 1914. He remained with Lieutenant Hughes, the Adjutant of his regiment, and two other men until they were all killed. He refused to leave Lieutenant Hughes until he was assured that this officer was dead and he then brought the latter's sword away with him.

(c) Subadar Harnam Singh, Jind Infantry, Imperial Service Troops, for his gallant conduct at Jasin on the 18th January 1915. He rallied a small party to cover a retirement and held the enemy in check until his party were all killed and he himself severely wounded and taken prisoner.

(d) Subadar Rhandir Singh, 2nd Kashmir Rifles, Imperial Service Troops, for his gallant behaviour in the action at Tanga on the 4th November 1914, when in command of a detachment which charged and secured the enemy's trenches and captured a machine gun. In leading his men he was severely wounded.

(e) No. 310 Sepoy Bal Bahadur Chetti, and No. 1275 Sepoy Dal Bahadur Thapa, 2nd Kashmir Rifles, Imperial Service Troops, for gallant behaviour on the night of the 18th-19th January 1915 at Jasin, in volunteering to carry a message to Jasin Post. The post was surrounded by the enemy and the errand was one of great danger. At night with two Africans they proceeded in a dug-out through the mangrove swamps adjoining the post and, though unable to get through the enemy's outposts which were in a close ring round the post and fired on them, remained out all night and brought in useful information.

No. 527.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to sanction the following admission to the Military Division of the Indian Order of Merit.

For admission to the 2nd Class of the Order.

Jemadar Pat Khan, Northern Waziristan Militia, for conspicuous gallantry in the action at Dredoni on the 27th March 1915, when his personal leading was mainly responsible for the successful action of the party he commanded. During the pursuit of the enemy it became necessary to seize a hill directly overlooking the line of their retreat. This hill was held by the enemy and Jemadar Pat Khan, on his own initiative, advanced with a section and rushed the hill, he himself reaching the top at least 50 yards ahead of his men. From the position thus gained he was able to bring an effective fire to bear on the retreating enemy thereby inflicting considerable loss on them.

HISTORICAL RECORD OF THE IMPERIAL VISIT TO INDIA, 1911.

This book, which has been compiled by the Government of India from the official records, contains a complete and authoritative account of the proceedings connected with the visit of Their Imperial Majesties to India and with the Coronation Durbar of December 1911, including lists of the persons taking part in all the various celebrations and ceremonies at which Their Imperial Majesties were present, as well as a large number of illustrations, portraits of Ruling Princes and others, coloured Persian and Sanscrit texts maps, plans, etc.

The book has been published by Mr. John Murray, Albemarle Street, London, W., and copies are now procurable from all the principal booksellers.

There are two editions—a popular one in a cloth binding, price Rs. 7-8-0, and a very limited edition de luxe, price Rs. 250, which has been subscribed for. As the popular edition is strictly limited, and a considerable portion of it has been absorbed in requisitions already received and in the requirements of libraries, schools, etc., it will probably be exhausted very soon after publication. Those who have not yet ordered copies but require them are therefore advised to order at an early date. Application should be made to the Superintendent, Government Printing, India, Calcutta.

For the Post Office, Central Circle, candidates who have passed the B.A. examination and who are under 25 years.

The initial pay will be Rs. 40 and there will be one year's probation.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, MAY 27, 1915

Final WHEAT forecast, 1914-15.

This forecast is based on the final reports on the wheat crop of the present season received from local authorities, and refers to 99·8 per cent of the total reported wheat acreage of India. The statistics, therefore, cover all the important wheat-growing areas.

The total area reported is 32,230,000 acres as compared with 32,148,000 acres reported in the special forecast published on the 14th April, 1915, and 28,475,000 acres, the revised final area of last year. The present figure, therefore, shows an increase of 3,755,000 acres, or 13 per cent, as against the final estimate of 1913-14. The total yield is estimated at 10,269,000 tons (or 47,922,000 quarters of 480 lbs.) as compared with 8,358,000 tons (or 39,004,000 quarters), the revised final estimate of last year, or an increase of nearly 23 per cent.

The detailed figures are as follows :-

(b) Revised figures.

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, the crop is grown in certain other tracts (namely, Burma, Madras, and Manpur Pargana) for which no reports are made, and the average area so grown for the last five years has been about 51,000 acres. An addition of approximately 0·2 per cent should be made to the estimated total yield on this account.

The seasonal conditions were, on the whole, favourable, except in the two provinces of Bihar and Orissa and Bengal, where the wheat crop is not of much importance. Some damage to the crop was, however, caused by rain and hail in April in almost all the tracts.

The total yield now estimated is a record one, even higher than the heavy crops of 1903-04, 1910-11, 1911-12, and 1912-13. The outturn per acre, it may be noted, works out to 714 lbs (or approximately 12 bushels), as against 657 lbs in 1913-14, 735 lbs in 1912-13, 714 lbs in 1911-12, 737 lbs in 1910-11, 768 lbs in 1909-10, 652 lbs in 1908-09, 599 lbs in 1907-08, 651 lbs in 1906-07, 728 lbs in 1905-06, 597 lbs in 1904-05, and 760 lbs in 1903-04. The highest outturns per acre in the present season are in Sind (1,069 lbs), in the United Provinces (933 lbs), and in the Punjab (785 lbs); these contain over 58 per cent of the total area under wheat.

It will be seen that the present estimate of yield, as against the final estimate of last year, shows an increase per cent of 79 in Rajputana, 68 in Sind, 37 in the United Provinces, 29 in Central India, 23 in the Punjab, 19 in Hyderabad, 16 in North-West Frontier Province, 15 in Bombay and the Central Provinces and Berar, while Bihar and Orissa shows a decrease of 40 per cent and Bengal 37 per cent.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Punjab (33·1 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is now returned at 11,195,000 acres (9,778,000 acres in British districts and 1,417,000 acres in Native States); this is 17 per cent larger than the area of last year. The total estimated yield is 3,925,000 tons (577,000 tons being in Native States), which is 23 per cent more than the yield of last year. The weather cleared after the middle of February; but there was moderately heavy precipitation in the second week of March, which benefited the unirrigated crop in the south-east and west. The rest of the month was fine, but it was followed by very unsettled weather and thunderstorms in the first fortnight of April, which damaged the crop slightly in a few central districts. In some of the submontane tracts the crop suffered from excessive rainfall. The clear and abnormally hot weather during the last week of April and the first week of May was favourable for harvesting operations, and the yield is generally normal to good. The crop has not, however, threshed out as well as was expected.

United Provinces (23·5 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area is reported to be 7,303,000 acres as compared with 6,406,000 acres of last year, or an increase of 14 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 3,041,000 tons, which is 37 per cent larger than that of last year. There is little to add to the character of the season described in the special forecast issued in April last. Though some rain fell in the first two weeks of that month, it was not heavy and did not seriously interfere with harvesting operations. When [illegible] the special forecast was issued the crops of all [illegible] divisions, except Meerut and Rohilkhand, had cu[illegible]; and the estimates then reported stand, except in these two divisions where the [illegible] caused by heavy rainfall was more serious [illegible] first anticipated. For the province as a wh[illegible] crop is estimated at 85 per cent of the normal, compared with 90 per cent reported in April last.

Central Provinces and Berar (11·7 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The combined area of British districts and Native States (3,393,000 acres) shows only a slight increase (0·3 per cent) over the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 789,000 tons (29,000 tons being in Native States), which is 15 per cent larger than the yield of last year. Sowings were generally successful and germination on the whole good. Cloudy weather caused some withering in parts of Damoh and in the Nerbudda Valley. Light to moderate rain was received in the subsequent months (December to March) and materially improved the condition of the young plants, especially in the northern districts, where the crop was suffering from lack of moisture. Some damage was, however, caused in places by the cloudy weather and hail which accompanied the rain. The weather was fairly dry in April, and this facilitated harvesting, threshing, and winnowing operations.

Bombay (5·7 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area is reported to be 2,194,000 acres (711,000 acres being in Native States), which is 4 per cent larger than the area of last year. The total estimated yield is 584,000 tons (223,000 tons being in Native States), which is 15 per cent above the yield of last year. The crop was damaged to some extent by cloudy weather and rain at the close of the season in parts of Gujarat and Deccan and by rust in places. In Khandesh it was damaged by rats and in Sholapur and east of Poona it suffered from deficiency of moisture. Elsewhere the crop did well.

Sind (1·7 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area is reported to be 696,000 acres (40,500 acres being in Native States), which is 42 per cent above the area of last year. The total estimated yield is 332,000 tons (21,600 tons being in Native States); this is 68 per cent in excess of the yield of last year. The crop was fair in Hyderabad and Karachi, and was slightly affected by rust in Thar and Parkar. Elsewhere it throve well.

Bihar and Orissa (4·4 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 1,218,000 acres, which shows a decrease of 9 per cent as compared with the area of last year. The total estimated yield (347,000 tons) shows a decrease of 40 per cent as compared with that of last year. The short rainfall at the sowing period and during the period of growth as well as attacks of insects in some areas affected the crop in the important districts of Bihar and in Palamau. Some damage was also caused by hailstorms in Saran and Hazaribagh.

North-West Frontier Province (3·5 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area is reported to be 1,176,000 acres, which is nearly 19 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 301,000 tons, or 16 per cent larger than that of last year. The rainfall was favourable at sowing time. The month of January was practically rainless except in Hazara which received light showers. General rain in February and March, though below the average, except in Hazara, Peshawar, and Kohat, proved very beneficial to the standing crops which were helped to maturity by the copious and well distributed rains of April. The season on the whole was very favourable, although damage was caused in April by hail in Kohat and Bannu and by floods in Dera Ismail Khan and Kurram.

Bengal (0·5 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at [illegible],000 acres, which is 7 per cent below the area of last year. The total estimated yield (32,000 tons) is 37 per cent smaller than that of last year. The season on the whole was unfavourable owing to deficient rainfall.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·1 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The area is 19,000 acres and the estimated yield 5,000 tons as against 5,000 acres and 2,000 tons last year.

Central India (8·6 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area reported amounts to 3,096,000 acres, which is 15 per cent above that of last year. The total yield is estimated at 642,000 tons, which is 29 per cent larger than that of last year. The details are as follows (the estimates of last year being given in brackets):—

Area:—Gwalior 1,208,000 acres (1,075,000), Indore 396,000 acres (402,000), Bhopal 783,000 acres (806,000), Bundelkhand 263,000 acres (79,000), Baghelkhand 124,000 acres (29,000), Malwa 150,000 acres (136,000), and Southern States 172,000 acres (168,000).

Rajputana (3·5 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area reported is 904,000 acres, which is 45 per cent larger than that of last year. The total estimated yield (219,000 tons) is 79 per cent above that of last year. Of the twenty States the more important are (the figures of last year being given in brackets):—

Area:—Bikaner 27,600 acres (6,700), Marwar 87,800 acres (112,200), Mewar 40,000 acres (36,000), Tonk 120,000 acres (71,800), Bundi 70,800 acres (38,100), Kotah 286,900 acres (161,300), Jaipur 77,700 acres (43,500), Alwar 34,900 acres (33,300), Bharatpur 44,200 acres (29,700), Dholpur 18,000 acres (10,800).

Hyderabad (3·5 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area is returned at 898,000 acres, which is 28 per cent larger than that of last year. The total estimated yield (51,000 tons) shows an increase of 19 per cent as compared with that of last year.

Mysore (0·01 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The area is estimated at 4,000 acres and the yield at 1,000 tons as compared with 3,000 acres and 1,000 tons of last year.

(a) Exports during the first half of May 1915 amounted to 57,500 tons, as compared with 15,800 tons and 123,900 tons in the corresponding periods of 1914 and 1913, respectively

Wheat crops in other countries.—In the present season, 1914-15, the chief wheat-producing countries are, in order of importance, the United States of America, Russia, India, France, Italy, Canada, the Argentine, Spain, and Australia; and the chief exporting countries are, in order of importance, the United States of America (89,000,000), the Argentine (13,000,000), Canada (7,000,000) and India. The figures stated in brackets after each country are the latest trade estimates of exportable surplus in quarters of 480 lbs each, for the year ending 31st July 1915 (including the quantities already exported). In regard to these figures, it is to be remembered that the focus of the world's wheat market is the United Kingdom, which took about 36 per cent of the total world's exportable surplus on the average of the last three years (1911-12 to 1913-14). Indian wheat generally predominates in the English market from July to September, Argentine wheat from March to May, Canadian wheat in June, Russian wheat in October and November, and American wheat from December to February.

The latest available information from the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, regarding the wheat crop of 1914-15 is as follows :— In the United States of America the estimate of the area under winter * wheat stands at 41,246,000 acres, or an increase of 11 per cent over last year's area, but the estimate for the winter * crop of Canada has been reduced to 1,062,000 acres, which is 9 per cent above the area of last year. In Italy the area sown is reported to be 12,350,000 acres, or nearly 5 per cent above the area of 1913-14. In the Argentine the estimate of area is 15,474 000 acres and that of yield 5,176,000 tons, the latter being 70 [illegible] cent larger than last year's yield. In Australia [illegible] while the estimates of yield are 790,000 to[illegible] 609,000 tons, respectively, the former sho[illegible] decrease of 71 per cent, but the latter an [illegible] of 90 per cent, as compared with 1913-14.

From unofficial sources it appears that in the United Kingdom the weather has been fine and favourable for all agricultural operations and spring sowing is nearing completion under much more favourable circumstances than was expected in February and March. The area sown to winter wheat is about 10 per cent and to spring wheat 5 per cent larger than in 1914. In France the weather has been on the whole fine and the area sown will show a smaller decrease than had been previously expected. The suspension of the import duty on wheat of 7 francs per quintal (220 lbs) from the first week of August 1914 has tended to encourage the import of wheat into France. In Italy a full average crop materially in excess of last year's is expected provided climatic conditions in the future are normal. The suspension and reduction of import duty on wheat in Italy of 7·50 lire per quintal from the 1st February 1915 has tended to lower the price. It appears that France and Italy have now discontinued making heavy purchases. In the United States of America, the weather in most parts of the wheat belt has continued quite favourable except in the important State of North Dakota, where drought had retarded the progress of wheat; reports from the Southern States are that more food and less cotton will be planted this year than last. In Canada an increase in the acreage is practically assured, the season being favourable and price inducement encouraging. In the Argentine the weather continued unsettled and was therefore detrimental to harvesting, but the reported loss of 500,000 tons seems too pessimistic. In Russia, the crop outlook on the whole is a favourable one; spring sowings are making seasonable progress and autumn wheat is doing well. It is said that as regards the spring wheat a very considerable reduction in outturn may be expected owing to lack of labour and to the disorganization of railway transport. Russia is in the background as a wheat shipper at the present time, but it is stated * that navigation at Archangel is either open or at the point of opening. In Spain crop prospects were unfavourable in a number of districts owing to drought, but later on rains have fallen in many places and the crop outlook has improved appreciably.

* Winter wheat forms only about 10 per cent of the total wheat crop of Canada, while in the United States it is about 63 per cent as calculated from the figures of 1913-14.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, JUNE 1, 1915

Final Forecast WINTER OILSEEDS (Rape, Mustard and Linseed), 1914-15

This forecast is based upon reports received from provinces where rape, mustard, and linseed are grown to any considerable extent. These provinces contain 99·2 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard, and 99 per cent of the total linseed area in British India. Of the Native States, estimates are furnished by Hyderabad and the States in the Bombay Presidency (including Baroda). No report is made by any other Native State.

The total area under rape and mustard is now reported to be 6,402,000 acres, which is 136,000 acres or 2 per cent larger than the finally revised area of last year. The total estimated yield is 1,195,000 tons, as compared with 1,087,000 tons, the revised final figure of last year, or an increase of 10 per cent. The detailed figures for the provinces are (in thousands of acres and tons) :—

The total estimated yield is 396,000 tons, as against 386,000 tons, the revised final estimate of last year, or an increase of 2·5 per cent. (a) Including Native States

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, the crops are grown in certain other tracts in British India, and the average areas so grown for the last five years have been some 47,000 acres of rape and mustard and some 33,000 acres of linseed. An addition of approximately 0·8 per cent (9,000 tons) should be made to the estimated total yield of rape and mustard, and of 1 per cent (4,000 tons) to that of linseed, on this account.

The condition of the crop on the whole is reported to be from fair to good, except in Bihar and Orissa and Bengal, and in the southern and eastern districts of the United Provinces, when the crops were adversely affected by drought.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Rape and mustard.

United Provinces (40·5 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown with the unmixed crop is reported to be 190,300 acres, which is 26 per cent over the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 43,400 tons, being nearly 89 per cent above last ye[illegible] yield. The area and yield of rapeseed grown [illegible] with other crops, chiefly for home consum[illegible] roughly estimated at 2,350,000 acres and 53[illegible] as compared with 2,154,000 acres and 3[illegible] last year. The sowing season was o[illegible] favourable, but was followed by [illegible]nged drought, which lasted till the beginnin[illegible] [illegible]ebruary. The rain came somewhat late fo[illegible] crops which are sown in unirrigated land. Some da[illegible] was also caused, particularly in the western [illegible]tricts, by the heavy rain of February and Ma[illegible] In the two eastern divisions, where rapeseed [illegible] largely grown unmixed, it suffered from the absence of rain in the early months, and the yield has been poor. Elsewhere it has been fair.

Bengal (21·4 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown is reported to be 1,315,600 acres, which is 0·2 per cent more than last year's area. The yield is estimated at 232,000 tons, being 13 per cent less than the yield of last year. The continued drought from February till the time of harvesting adversely affected the outturn. The season, on the whole, was unfavourable.

Punjab (18·9 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The total area is estimated at 1,076,900 acres, which is 7 per cent above last year's area. The yield is estimated at 168,200 tons, being nearly 2 per cent above last year's yield. The season was throughout favourable for sowings, but in some districts of the south-east and west of the province, rain, hail, and frost in the second week of March and in the first half of April damaged the crops, with the exception of toria, (an early variety of rapeseed), which is harvested in December and January.

Bihar and Orissa (10·7 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 681,300 acres as against 751,900 acres for last year. This shows a decrease of 9 per cent, which is attributed to unfavourable weather conditions at sowing time.

The total yield is estimated at 97,600 tons, being 41 per cent below last year's yield. In February and March the rainfall was above the average in most districts. The short rainfall during the periods of sowing and growth and the excessive rainfall towards the end of the season affected the outturn in several districts.

Assam (4·7 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The total area sown is estimated at 304,500 acres, which is 2 per cent larger than the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 58,200 tons, being 5 per cent less than that of last year. The short rainfall was unfavourable to the crop at the sowing time, and the continued drought in December and January retarded its growth to a considerable extent.

North-West Frontier Province (1·8 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 107,300 acres, which is 24 per cent less than last year's area. The yield is estimated at 12,200 tons, which is 23 per cent short of last year's yield. The season was favourable for sowings, but the high price of wheat prevailing in the market at the sowing season led to a large increase in the area under wheat and caused a corresponding reduction in the area under oilseeds in all districts except Kohat and Bannu.

Sind (1·1 per cent of the total area under rape [illegible] mustard in British India).—The total area [illegible]orted to be 286,400 acres (12,300 acres [illegible] Native State of Khairpur), which is 21 per [illegible]han last year's area. The total yield is esti[illegible]200 tons (600 tons being in the Native [illegible]rpur), which is 23 per cent less than last [illegible] The cultivation was restricted owing [illegible]ter attention being paid to wheat, (2) [illegible] water supply in Nawabshah, and (3) [illegible] being under water at the time of sowing in [illegible]chi. The crop is reported to have turned out [illegible] in Karachi; elsewhere it was fair.

Bombay (0·1 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The total area reported is 83,200 acres (79,000 acres being in Native States), which is practically the same as last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 20,700 tons (20,100 tons being in Native States), which is nearly 3 per cent short of last year's yield. The crop is reported to have done well in Gujarat where it is principally grown.

Hyderabad reports under mustard 7,000 acres and 200 tons as compared with 5,600 acres and 100 tons last year.

Linseed.

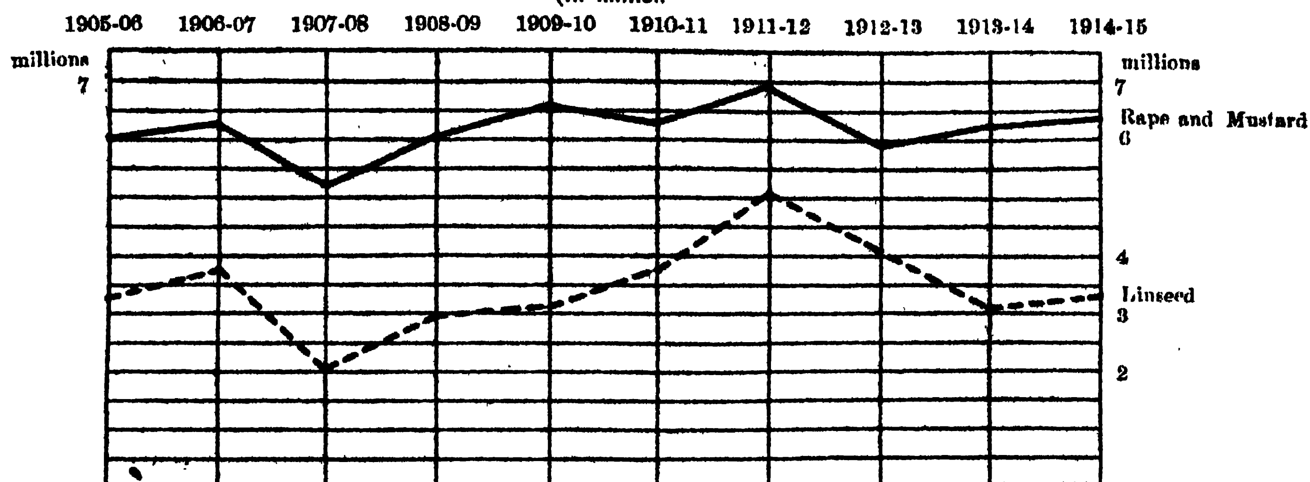
Central Provinces and Berar (37·9 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 1,223,700 acres, which is 28 per cent above the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 79,600 tons, which is nearly 13 per cent larger than the yield of last year. Winter showers, where received, benefited the crop; but damage was done in several districts by insufficiency of moisture and cloudy weather, while the crop also suffered in places from hail, rust, and insects.

United Provinces (32·9 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area under the unmixed crop is reported to be 266,300 acres, or 11 per cent more than last year's area. In the Benares and Gorakhpur divisions the area fell off considerably; elsewhere there has been an increase. The yield is estimated at 47,600 tons, which is nearly 23 per cent above the yield of last year. The area and yield of linseed grown mixed with other crops, chiefly for home consumption, are roughly estimated at 620,000 acres and 110,000 tons, as compared with 367,000 acres and 59,000 tons for last year. Reports as to the character of the season are the same as summarised above under "rape and mustard." In Bundelkhand, where linseed is largely grown unmixed, the crop suffered from the absence of rain in the early months, and the yield has been poor; elsewhere it has been fair.

Bihar and Orissa (16 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The total area is reported to be 623,800 acres, which is 4 per cent short of last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 101,700 tons, being 32 per cent less than that of last year. The character of the season and the condition of the crop are the same as described above under "rape and mustard."

Bengal (6 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 188,700 acres, which is nearly 3 per cent short of last year's area. The yield is estimated at 26,600 tons, or 22 per cent less than the yield of last year. The season was, on the whole, unfavourable owing to drought.

Bombay (5 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 128,000 acres (9,500 acres being in Native States), which falls 26 per cent below last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 17,000 tons (600 tons being in Native States), which is 21 per cent above the yield of last year. The decrease in area is attributed to diminished demand for export abroad owing to the outbreak of the war. Except for some slight damage by rats in Khandesh and from deficiency of moisture in Sholapur and east of Poona, the crop did fairly well everywhere.



Punjab (1·2 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area sown is reported to be 47,200 acres, which is 21 per cent larger than the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 4,500 tons, which is 36 per cent above last year's yield. The character of the season is the same as described above under "rape and mustard."

Hyderabad reports 234,000 acres under linseed, which is 43 per cent below last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 8,900 tons, being 46 per cent less than the yield of last year.

Oilseed crops in foreign countries :—The latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, shows that the estimates of the linseed crop of 1914-15 in the Argentine are 4,261,000 acres and 1,288,000 tons, as compared with 4,395,000 acres and 977,000 tons last year. His Majesty's Consul-General at Odessa reported that in Russia the linseed crop was good in quality, but below the normal in quantity ; winter rapeseed was decidedly above the normal crop and summer rape a satisfactory one ; mustard seed was fully satisfactory as regards both quantity and quality. From unofficial sources it would appear that in Canada the estimate for linseed is 188,000 tons against 438,500 tons in the previous year, and in the United States the estimate for the same crop is 389,000 tons or 57,000 tons short of the previous year.

INDIAN ORDER OF MERIT.

No. 525.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to sanction the following admissions to the Military Division of the Indian Order of Merit :—

For admission to the 2nd Class of the Order.

(a) No. 2131 Sepoy Dasunda Singh, 89th Punjabis, for conspicuous gallantry in the operations on the Suez Canal on the 3rd February 1915. He brought up ammunition under a heavy fire and each time on the return journey carried back a wounded man to the ambulance which was some 800 to 1,000 yards in rear. He also carried Sepoy Hakim Singh, who was killed, and Sepoy Sucha Singh, who was wounded, from the firing line, removing his boots in order to perform the journeys quicker.

(b) No. 1753 Havildar Muhammad Azim, 92nd Punjabis, for conspicuous gallantry near Serapeum in operations on the Suez Canal on the 4th February 1915. He was wounded in the side when close to the trench of the enemy, who had made signs of surrender and apparently treacherously fired on the company he was with. He remained with his section though wounded and when his company took up a position to re-engage the enemy he kept his men steady under a hot fire and directed their fire with coolness and pluck. He was present at the final surrender of the enemy and marched back with the prisoners to camp, refusing any attention to his wound until he arrived there.

(c) No. 279 Naick Safdar Ali (killed) and No. 1878 Sepoy Sher Khan, 62nd Punjabis, for conspicuous bravery in the action near Tussum in the Suez Canal operations on the 3rd February 1915. These two men led their comrades down a steep sandy bank practically to the water level, under a particularly hot fire, to charge the enemy who were landing from a boat. Sepoy Sher Khan was severely wounded 6 yards from the boat. In the final advance to the boat Naick Safdar Ali was again in advance of his comrades and was hit one yard from the water's edge. He died a few minutes later. The widow (if any) of Naick Safdar Ali is admitted to the pension of the 2nd Class of the Order with effect from the date of his death.

(d) No. 1775 Naick Mihan Singh, 92nd Punjabis, for conspicuous gallantry at Tussum in the operations on the Suez Canal on the 3rd February 1915, when his company moved out to counter-attack some of the enemy in a trench close to the post. Naick Mihan Singh, alone, worked his way to a point whence he shot and killed one of a group of the enemy who were firing on and had wounded some of his company, the remainder of the group rushing back to their trench. On being joined by other men of his squad he kept up a fire on the enemy in the trench and enabled his company to get to a point from which they could enfilade the trench, after which the enemy surrendered. During the remainder of the day's fighting Naick Mihan Singh led his squad with coolness and pluck.

(e) Jemadar Indar Singh, and No. 3397 Havildar Ganda Singh, 128th Pioneers, for gallant conduct and good work at Tussum on the 3rd February 1915 in the operations on the Suez Canal. When Lieutenant Fitzgibbon who commanded a platoon was killed, the command of the platoon devolved upon Jemadar Indar Singh who continued the fight until relieved by the 2nd Rajputs. Jemadar Indar Singh and Havildar Ganda Singh behaved gallantly in charging a number of the enemy who had landed with fixed bayonets.

(f) No. 805 Rifleman Joglal Rai (died of wounds), 2nd Battalion, 10th Gurkha Rifles, for conspicuous bravery on the 3rd February 1915 in the operations on the Suez Canal, in responding to a call for volunteers to carry a message along the firing line to 2nd-Lieutenant Scott. Rifleman Joglal Rai ran along the firing line with the message and was wounded twice before he delivered it to 2nd-Lieutenant Scott who had him attended to. This rifleman showed great pluck in remaining in the firing line after he was wounded and until the order was received to retire when he went back with the company. He had to be ordered to go to hospital and died of his wound six days later.

His widow (if any) is admitted to the pension of the 2nd Class of the Order with effect from the date of his death.

(g) No 726 Havildar (now Jemadar) Suba Singh, 56th Punjabi Rifles (Frontier Force), for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, when in command of a patrol of nine men on the Suez Canal on the 22nd March 1915. Havildar Suba Singh surprised and engaged a strong raiding party of Turks estimated at 400, under German officers, and in the fight that ensued he showed a determined front and fought with great gallantry. Although severely wounded, Havildar Suba Singh continued to lead and encourage his men and extricated his patrol from a very difficult situation with a loss of two killed and three wounded, whilst the losses to the enemy were estimated at 12 killed and 15 wounded.

No. 526.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to sanction the following admissions to the Military Division of the Indian Order of Merit :—

For admission to the 2nd Class of the Order.

(a) Subadar Bakhtawar Singh, 13th Rajputs (The Shekhawati Regiment), for gallant behaviour in the action at Tanga on the 3rd November 1914. Although severely wounded, he continued to rally his men and to cover the retirement.

(b) No. 1222 Sepoy Fazil Khan, 101st Grenadiers, for gallant behaviour in the action at Tanga on the 3rd November 1914 He remained with Lieutenant Hughes, the Adjutant of his regiment, and two other men until they were all killed. He refused to leave Lieutenant Hughes until he was assured that this officer was dead and he then brought the latter's sword away with him.

(c) Subadar Harnam Singh, Jind Infantry, Imperial Service Troops, for his gallant conduct at Jasin on the 18th January 1915. He rallied a small party to cover a retirement and held the enemy in check until his party were all killed and he himself severely wounded and taken prisoner.

(d) Subadar Rhandir Singh, 2nd Kashmir Rifles, Imperial Service Troops, for his gallant behaviour in the action at Tanga on the 4th November 1914, when in command of a detachment which charged and secured the enemy's trenches and captured a machine gun. In leading his men he was severely wounded.

(e) No 310 Sepoy Bal Bahadur Chetti, and No. 1275 Sepoy Dal Bahadur Thapa, } 2nd Kashmir Rifles, Imperial Service Troops, for gallant behaviour on the night of the 18th-19th January 1915 at Jasin, in volunteering to carry a message to Jasin Post. The post was surrounded by the enemy and the errand was one of great danger. At night with two Africans they proceeded in a dug-out through the mangrove swamps adjoining the post and, though unable to get through the enemy's outposts which were in a close ring round the post and fired on them, remained out all night and brought in useful information.

No. 527.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to sanction the following admission to the Military Division of the Indian Order of Merit :—

For admission to the 2nd Class of the Order.

Jemadar Pat Khan, Northern Waziristan Militia, for conspicuous gallantry in the action at Dredoni on the 27th March 1915, when his personal leading was mainly responsible for the successful action of the party he commanded.

During the pursuit of the enemy it became necessary to seize a hill directly overlooking the line of their retreat. This hill was held by the enemy and Jemadar Pat Khan, on his own initiative, advanced with a section and rushed the hill, he himself reaching the top at least 50 yards ahead of his men. From the position thus gained he was able to bring an effective fire to bear on the retreating enemy thereby inflicting considerable loss on them.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 29th May 1915.

Burma.—Tharrawaddy reports 9·12 inches of rain. The rainfall in the seaboard tract and in Delta was light to moderate and was good in the north of the Province. In the dry zone the fall was light and unevenly distributed. Agricultural operations for winter rice in Lower Burma and for upland crops in Upper Burma are proceeding. Sowing of cotton and sesamum is progressing. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon has risen slightly as compared with that of the previous week and is Rs. 110 per 100 baskets against the normal price of Rs 111.

Assam.—Heavy rain fell in the Surma Valley and in parts of the Brahmaputra Valley interfering in places with agricultural operations. Floods have occurred in Sylhet, Kamrup, Nowgong and the Garo Hills and have caused damage and apprehension of damage to paddy Plucking and manufacture of tea continue Prospects are fair to good. Ploughing of land for the sowing of paddy is generally in progress. The price of common rice has risen slightly. Cattle disease is reported from five districts.

Bengal.—During the week heavy rain fell only in Mymensingh but the fall was light to moderate in the rest of the Province Ploughing of fields for winter rice is in progress Sowing of autumn crops has been almost finished Weeding of autumn paddy and jute is being hampered in places by excessive rain. Standing crops in Mymensingh and in some of the northern Bengal districts have somewhat suffered for the same reason. Elsewhere prospects are good. Cattle disease is reported from eleven districts. The average price of common rice for the Province has risen by about 0·5 per cent as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa—Light and scattered rain was received in Bihar. There was practically no rain in Orissa and Chota Nagpur. The weather was very hot. Preparation of lands and sowing of autumn crops continue. The standing sugarcane crop and vegetables are doing well. The average price of common rice has risen as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient Cattle disease is reported from several districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—Slight rain fell over the Himalayan and eastern submontane regions Standing crops are in good condition Sowings of indigo, cotton, maize and chari continue. Food, fodder and water are ample everywhere. Agricultural stock is in good condition but slight cattle disease is still reported from a few districts. Prospects are favourable. Markets are adequately stocked. Prices are practically stationary.

Punjab—Except for slight showers in a few districts in the southeast and west the weather was dry. Harvesting of spring crops continues except in the southeast. The yield is normal to good except in the submontane tracts where some of the wheat is being found shrivelled and small on threshing. This is doubtless due to the heavy rains and winds of the winter. Sowings of sugarcane, cotton and other autumn crops are in progress and are normal. The condition of standing extra spring crops, sugarcane and cotton is generally good. Cattle are healthy and fodder and water for drinking and irrigation are sufficient Prices of wheat and other food grains are fluctuating and are generally at warning rates while those of other grains are either stationary or are rising slightly and range between warning and scarcity rates or are above scarcity rates. Prices of wheat :—Ambala and Lyallpur 10 and Lahore and Rawalpindi 10½ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province—The week was rainless. The weather is hot and clear. Standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated areas are fairly good. Hail has fallen in a few villages of the Lakki tahsil of the Bannu district but has caused no damage. Sowings of extra spring and autumn crops in Peshawar and of autumn crops in the Bannu tahsil continue. Harvesting of spring crops is proceeding with outturn above average in Peshawar and good to average in Bannu. The condition of cattle is generally good. Fodder and water are procurable. Prices are high but are falling generally in Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan and also in the case of wheat and maize in Peshawar where prices of barley and gram are rising.

Jammu.—Slight rain fell during the week. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 9 to 14 and maize from 11 to 18 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is good. Cattle disease of mild type prevails in the Jasmergarh, Udhampur and Ramban tahsils. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—Insignificant rain fell during the week. Spring crops are poor in the Anantnag district and in the Sripartabsinghpura tahsil and good elsewhere. Agricultural operations for autumn crops are in progress. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are high in the Baramulla tahsil and normal elsewhere. Water and fodder are sufficient.

Rajputana.—The weather is hot and clear. Lands are being prepared for autumn sowings. The condition of cattle is good. Fodder and water are sufficient. Prices have fallen by half a seer in Bharatpur, Kotah and Jhalawar and are stationary elsewhere.

Central India.—Slight rain fell in Alirajpur of the Southern States. Harvesting of spring crops has been completed in Bundelkhand and Baghelkhand. Irrigation of sugarcane is in progress in Gwalior. Lands are being prepared for the coming autumn crops everywhere. The probable outturn is good in Malwa and in the Southern States. Agricultural stock is in good condition except in the Petlawad pargana of the Indore State. Cattle disease is reported from the Theonari and Teonthai tahsils of the Rewa State and from parts of Dhar and Alirajpur of the Southern States. The fodder supply is sufficient but water is somewhat deficient in the parganas of Khachrod, Shajapur, Agar and Bakaner of the Gwalior State. Prices are fluctuating slightly in the Mehidpur, Nimar and Rampura-Bhanpura districts of the Indore State, are normal in Bhopal, are high in Baghelkhand and are steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been hot and occasionally cloudy and windy. Preparation of land for the sowing of autumn crops is in progress. Fodder and water are generally sufficient. Cattle are in good condition. Fluctuations in prices are unimportant.

Feudatory States.—Land is being prepared for autumn sowings. Sowing of early rice is in progress in parts of Bastar, Udaipur, Sirguja and Jashpur. Rice is dear in Bastar and Jashpur and gram in the latter State, while wheat is cheaper in both States.

Bombay.—Rain fell during the week in Ratnagiri, Kanara, the Deccan, the Karnatak, Savantvadi and Kolhapur. Cotton picking continues in Kaira and Rewa Kantha. Preparation for the cultivation of autumn crops is progressing. The fodder supply is sufficient except in two mahals of Karachi, four talukas of Thar and Parkar, two talukas of Nawabshah and one taluka of Hyderabad. Cattle are in good condition. Agricultural stock is sufficient except in two talukas of Poona. Drinking water is adequate. Water for irrigation is generally sufficient. Prices are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—Very slight rain fell during the week. The average fall was 1 cent. The late rice crop is being harvested in a few parts. Lands are being prepared for autumn sowings. Water scarcity prevails in one taluka, fodder scarcity in two and cattle disease in four. Prices of grains are almost constant. The highest price in districts is juar 10½ seers in Warangal and the lowest 25 seers in Adilabad.

Mysore.—The rainfall was light to fair. The price of rice and ragi has fallen in Chitaldrug. Markets are well supplied. The outturn of the harvested paddy and sugarcane is fair. Ploughing, manuring and transplanting operations are in progress generally. Paddy, ragi, sugarcane and cotton have been sown in parts. Standing crops are generally in fair condition. Prospects of the season are generally good but more rain is wanted in parts. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Rainfall 61 cents. Ploughing for rice continues. Prices of food grains are high. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall was very heavy in Travancore, good in the west coast and the Nilgiris, fair in Coimbatore and light or nil elsewhere. Standing crops are fair to good, but require rain in parts of one district. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding normally. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water-supply is sufficient except in Guntur, Kurnool and Trichinopoly and in parts of Godavari, the Deccan, Nellore, South Arcot, central parts, Madura, Ramnad and the west coast. Pasture is sufficient except in Guntur, Kurnool, Bellary, Cuddapah and South Canara and in parts of seven other districts. Fodder is sufficient. Prices show a slight tendency to rise.

Irrigation.

Simla, the 9th June 1915.

Review of Irrigation in India in 1913-14.

Classification of Irrigation Works.

Irrigation Works in India are divided into two main classes, viz., major and minor works. Major Works are sub-divided into :—

(a) Productive public works, the capital of which is usually provided from borrowed money.

(b) Protective works, designed as a protection against famine, the capital of which is provided from current revenues, and is usually met from the annual grant under Famine Relief and Insurance.

Capital and revenue accounts are kept for all major works.

Minor works are constructed from funds provided from the current revenues of India, and, broadly speaking, consist of irrigation systems which are not sufficiently important to treat as major works. Some of them are old works constructed by the former rulers of this country, and extended or restored by the British Government; some are works which have been constructed by the British Government; others again, are village works originally provided by private or communal effort, the control of which the State has been obliged to assume owing to disputes between the parties interested or their inability to maintain the efficiency of the works.

Capital and revenue accounts are maintained for the more important minor works, but for those on which the capital outlay has not exceeded half a lakh of rupees, revenue accounts only are, as a rule, maintained. There is a third class of minor works, consisting for the most part of small tanks, for which neither capital nor revenue accounts are kept. These exist principally in the Madras Presidency.

Productive Public Works.

2. Productive public works are expected within 10 years after the probable date of their completion to yield sufficient revenue to pay their working expenses and the annual interest calculated at 4 per cent on the capital invested. No project is now sanctioned as a productive public work unless it can be shown beyond reasonable doubt that when fully developed it will fulfil these conditions. This standard was not attained in the case of the earlier irrigation projects, and thus it has happened that several large irrigation works which were financed from borrowed capital, are not remunerative. There are 14 such works, viz., two in Bihar and Orissa and two in Bengal, seven in the Deccan and Gujarat, two in Madras and one in the North-West Frontier Province. They are still retained on the list of productive works, but expenditure against their capital account is now charged against the current revenues of India. The total accumulated losses on these 14 works have exceeded the sum of 11¼ crores. But though they have proved financial failures in the ordinary commercial sense, they have been indirectly of great value in securing large areas of cultivation against the vicissitudes of the seasons.

3. The remaining works in operation, 43* in number, satisfy productive conditions. These works collectively paid during the year 11·92 per cent on their capital outlay; while after paying interest charges, the surplus revenue, which they had contributed to the general revenues of the country up to the end of 1913-14, amounted to over 47¾ crores of rupees against 37·69 crores, the capital invested on them. The financial results, the area irrigated, and the mileage in operation for all productive public works in operation, are shown separately by provinces in Statement I.

* NOTE.—Except where otherwise stated, this review relates to works actually in operation. The figures in the appended Financial Results of Irrigation Operations deal both with works in operation and with those under construction. Hence the figures in the review do not at first sight agree with those contained in the statements referred to.

Areas irrigated and return realised by productive works.

4. During the year under review the total area irrigated by all the productive public works, excluding branches in Native States of the Punjab, amounted to 16,320,500 acres*. Towards this total the Punjab canals contributed nearly 7 million acres, Madras 3½, the United Provinces 3 and Sind 1½ million acres. In Bihar and Orissa an area of 810,000 acres was attained. The return on capital is highest in the Punjab, where the canals yielded 15·45 per cent. The next province in this respect is Madras, where a return of 13·26 per cent was realised, excluding the Kurnool and Barur systems referred to in paragraph 2, expenditure on which is charged to Revenue. In the United Provinces and Sind the returns realised were 8·10 per cent and 5·39 per cent respectively. Details regarding other provinces and administrations will be found in Statement I. The return on productive works as a whole excluding those under construction and not earning revenue, was 9·74 per cent on the capital outlay.

Protective Works.

5. There were in operation in the year under review 30 protective works which together irrigated a total of 553,200 acres. The most important works are the Ramtek reservoir in the Central Provinces, the Betwa and Ken canals in the United Provinces, the Rushikulya in Madras, and the Nira and Godavari systems in the Bombay Presidency. A number of small but interesting tank works are to be found in the Central Provinces. They were sanctioned as experimental works, in accordance with the recommendations of the Irrigation Commission, in order to test how far the people were willing to resort to irrigation for the maturing of their crops and what water rates they were prepared to pay. The results obtained are gratifying and show that the people are beginning to realise the great advantage of irrigation.

Minor Works. Works for which capital and revenue accounts are kept

6. There were 119 works so classed in 1913-14, the majority of which are in Bombay and Madras. Nine are purely navigation works. The net revenue paid by works of this category amounted to Rs. 30,91,790 (excluding navigation canals) or a return of 7·66 per cent on the capital outlay, against 7·61 per cent in the previous year. Nearly all the minor works in Sind return exceptionally high percentages; but as some large projects with which it is intended to amalgamate many existing works are under consideration, their transfer to the major works class has been postponed for the present. The total area served by works of this class was 2,250,700 acres. This figure includes the area shown under Burma, viz., 489,570 acres, which is not under actual irrigation, but represents the area of cultivation on lands reclaimed by river flood embankments.

Works for which only revenue accounts are kept

7. There are numerous works which maintain only revenue accounts. They are credited with a share of the land revenue depending on their maintenance and are debited with all expenditure incurred on construction, extension, improvements and maintenance. During the year reviewed these works irrigated an area of 2½ million acres and returned a net revenue of Rs. 33,27,097.

Works for which neither capital nor revenue accounts are kept.

8. As explained in the opening paragraph of this review, practically all the works of the class which have neither capital nor revenue accounts are situated in the Madras Presidency. They consist of some 37,000 tanks and irrigation channels mainly the former, the improvements and repairs of which are executed by the Public Works Department, or, in the case of the smaller works, by civil officers. The areas irrigated by works of this class in 1913-14 aggregated to 3,275,200 acres. The area irrigated in 1912-13 was 3,421,917 acres.

9. In the Punjab the conditions were very favourable for kharif sowing owing to the rains of March 1913; the months of April and May were unusually dry, but the commencement of the monsoon early in June assured a good harvest, the total rainfall was somewhat in excess of the normal during kharif. The rabi season began well as the late rain had helped extensive sowing, but it proved extremely disappointing. The months of October and November were entirely rainless and the slight showers which were received between December and March, though beneficial so far as they went, were as a rule, insufficient.

The demand during both crops was keen and during the rabi was met with difficulty. In spite of this, the area irrigated by canals of all classes was 8,323,464 acres of which 8,000,947 acres matured, as against 8,065,720 and 7,495,559 acres, respectively, the average of the triennium ending 1912-13: the increase is due mainly to the extra area brought under irrigation by the Upper Chenab and Lower Bari Doab Canals and to sufficient volumes being available in the rivers for the inundation canals during the hot weather.

The Lower Chenab Canal continues to show a record of remarkable progress. It served 2,245,598 acres and earned a gross revenue of more than Rs. 154¾ lakhs. The net revenue realized from this canal was equivalent to 42·15 per cent on capital outlay.

The Lower Jhelum Canal also continues to show improvement, the net revenue having gone up to 20·82 per cent. The large increase in net revenue on the Upper Sutlej Inundation Canals (21·75 on capital outlay against 5·65 per cent in the previous year) is attributable to the better condition of the river and the canals during 1912-13: this increased the rabi area on those canals, and so affected the collections of the year under report.

Rapid progress was made during the year on the Triple project. On the Upper Chenab Canal the area irrigated showed a falling off of 35,890 acres as compared with the project forecast, but the figures of the two years (1912-13 and 1913-14, the years of its working) taken together were well in excess of the forecast for those years viz., 280,272 acres against 240,000 acres.

The Lower Bari Doab Canal was formally opened by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor on the 12th April 1913; and irrigation was begun in July 1913. The result of the first year's working was highly satisfactory, the actual area irrigated being considerably more than was expected.

As stated last year neither the Upper Chenab Canal nor the Lower Bari Doab Canal can work to full advantage until the Upper Jhelum Canal has been completed, as they cannot get a cold weather supply until the surplus water of the Jhelum river can be made available to augment the supplies in the Chenab and Ravi on which the Upper Chenab and Lower Bari systems are at present dependent.

Very satisfactory progress was made during the year on the Upper Jhelum Canal. It was expected that the canal would be opened in the autumn of 1914, but in April the river bund breached, and the foundation pit and deep cutting beyond were flooded. This accident caused a set back but it is hoped that the canal will be opened in the autumn of the current year.

Investigations are proceeding in connection with the Sutlej valley project for the utilization of the surplus water of the Sutlej river.

10. In the United Provinces the year was marked by intense drought in both seasons. The whole of the tracts commanded by the canals were affected by drought, and famine was declared in the districts of Hamirpur, Jalaun and Banda and in a portion of Etawah; and scarcity in Jhansi, Muttra, portions of Agra and Allahabad, and in the Badaun, Moradabad, Bareilly, Shahjehanpur and Fatehpur districts.

The kharif season was most abnormal. Rain fell in May and the monsoon which set in in June ceased at the end of August. The rainfall was fitful and very deficient being from 30 to 50 per cent below the normal. Owing to these conditions demand for canal irrigation never entirely ceased and the canals could not be closed. The winter rains also failed and the resources of the canals were taxed to the utmost. The sowings of the rabi crops within the area commanded by the canals was entirely dependent on irrigation and the supplies were everywhere insufficient to meet this intense demand.

The experience of the year has shown the urgent necessity for additional storage for the Betwa, Dhasan, and Ken canals in Bundhelkhand, for the fuller protection of the tracts commanded by them on the recurrence of a season like that of the year under review when not only did the cold weather supplies of these rains fail at an unusually early date but the winter rains also. On the Betwa canal, for example, the available supplies were sufficient to give little more than a paleo watering whereas under the severe drought conditions that prevailed one and in some cases two more waterings were required to bring the crop to maturity.

The total area irrigated was 751,631 acres more than that of last year, and 980,158 acres in excess of the average area irrigated during the triennium ending 1912-13. The increase was due to the drought.

There was unavoidable delay in the erection of the temporary bunds across the Ganges which divert the river supply into the Ganges canal. Had there been a permanent weir not only would a very considerable area of kharif crops on the Ganges canal have escaped the effects of the early cessation of the monsoon but the additional supply that could have been secured would have permitted a very much larger area of rabi crops being sown on the Ganges, Lower Ganges, and Agra canal systems.

The total assessments of the year amounted to 125 lakhs of rupees or 12 lakhs more than in 1912-13.

11. In Madras the rainfall of both monsoons was below the average and the net cropped area in the Presidency during the year under review was 38 million acres which was less than the previous year's figures by 1 million. As the seasons were not so favourable as in the previous year, the area irrigated under all classes of works showed a decrease of about 178,000 acres.

12. In Sind the rainfall is usually negligible and cultivators are therefore obliged to depend almost entirely upon canal irrigation. The canals being of the inundation class are in turn dependent upon the height and duration of the floods in the Indus during the irrigating season. The inundation of 1913-14 was not particularly good. It is generally considered that the river has not reached a fair irrigating level until the reading on the gauge at Sukkur is 13 ft. and that on the gauge at Kotri is 17 ft. During the year under review these levels were reached for only 16 days and 66 days, respectively, as compared with the averages of 43 days and 66 days for the previous 10 years. The rainfall for the year, however, was both abnormally heavy and opportune. This heavy rainfall largely made up for the deficiency of canal water, though in some parts, especially in the south of Sind, it did considerable damage to the crops.

Taking Sind as a whole, the area under irrigation and gross revenue during the year show an increase of 168,937 acres and 2,03,326 rupees, respectively, as compared with the average of the last 3 years. The present area under irrigation is only about a quarter of the culturable area of the province. A considerable extension of irrigation is looked forward to when the great Rohri Canal and the Sukkur Barrage are constructed, as this project will provide reliable perennial supplies of water in Sind in the place of the present fluctuating supplies dependent upon the floods in the Indus and upon the vagaries of the river which is constantly changing its course.

13. In Bombay (Deccan and Gujarat) the irrigation works in operation are limited in scope compared with those of other provinces. In Gujarat the rainfall during the year was favourable and the supply of the Hathmati was good. As a consequence the area irrigated was larger than any previous record. The four new tanks in the Kaira Collectorate which were so successful last year yielded very little irrigation this year. In the Central Division the total area of irrigation both under major and minor works was a little under the average. It was generally much less in Khandesh because of favourable rainfall though rather above the average in Sholapur due to a brisk demand consequent on the failure of the later rains. The revenue was, however, considerably higher than before due to the enhanced rates now charged. In the Southern Division there was a considerable increase in the area of irrigation due to the irregularity of the rainfall in the kharif season and a deficiency of rain in the rabi season.

All the important protective irrigation works in the Bombay Presidency are situated in the Deccan Irrigation Division. Of the works in being, the Nira Left Bank Canal is the largest in the Deccan and lies in the south of the Poona District. The area irrigated on this canal has steadily increased during recent years and yielded an increasing gross revenue which in this year reached the satisfactory figure of 9 per cent on the total cost of the work. Of the new protective works, the Godavari Canals project is approaching completion. The storage work called Lake Beale is on the Darna River. The lake filled well and supplied far more water than is yet required for the canals. On the whole, the year was very favourable in the Deccan where an increase of 55,000 acres above the average was recorded.

The two large protective works under construction in the Deccan are (1) the Pravara River Works project and (2) the Nira Right Bank Canal project. The storage for the former is at Bhandardara and is termed Lake Arthur Hill. It will be three or four years before an appreciable quantity of stored water can be let down from Lake Arthur Hill for irrigation under the Pravara Canals. Although work on the Nira Right Bank Canal was somewhat hampered by scarcity of labour, on the whole good progress was made on this project, the total expenditure of the year amounting to over Rs. 26¾ lakhs. This work, on completion, will be the largest protective irrigation work in India.

14. The canal systems in Bengal, the most important of which are the Midnapur, the Hijili Tidal canal, the Circular and Eastern and the Madaripur Bhil systems are used principally for navigation purposes. The Midnapore canal is also utilised for irrigation.

The total area irrigated by the latter was 80,179 acres, a result which is practically the same as that attained during the previous year. The financial results of this work do not fulfil productive conditions, the revenues being just sufficient to meet the working expenses. The estimated value of crops raised on the area irrigated by it amounted to Rs. 34¾ lakhs.

15. In Bihar and Orissa the Sone and Orissa canals of the productive class are used both for irrigation and navigation. The area irrigated during the year was 809,533 acres showing a decrease of 120,481 acres compared with the area irrigated during the preceding year. The decrease occurred on the Sone canals and was due to the small demand for canal water during the rabi season, the fields having already retained a sufficient amount of moisture for the rabi crops from the plentiful rainfall during the kharif season. The financial results of these works do not fulfil productive conditions, but the estimated value of crops raised on the area irrigated by them amounted to over 3¼ crores of rupees, a sum which is a little less than two-thirds of the total capital cost of the works.

The whole length (62 miles) of the Tribeni canal was practically completed 50 miles of which were in operation during the year under review. The prospects of demand for canal water are very favourable, the area irrigated during the year under report being 41,435 acres against 30,600 anticipated in the project forecast.

The construction estimate of the canal was closed on 31st March 1914.

16. In Burma the rainfall was generally sufficient and well distributed, the districts of Meiktila and Yamethin being the only exceptions. Abnormal floods occurred in the Mandalay District in October 1913, and very serious damage occurred to the Shwetachaung and Mandalay Canals, the head-works of the latter project being practically totally destroyed. The area irrigated by productive works amounted to 279,488 acres as compared with 257,749 acres in the previous year. The value of the crops grown on lands irrigated from major works amounted to 88.6 lakhs against the estimated value of the previous year of Rs. 94.5 lakhs, a clear indication that the price of paddy had fallen during the year.

17. In the Central Provinces the rainfall was short and badly distributed especially in the Chhattisgarh Division and in the northern parts of the Province. The result was a much greater demand for irrigation than there had ever been before. The area irrigated during the year was 75,240 acres, while in the previous year it had only been 49,174 acres. Several tanks in the northern districts failed owing to the scanty rainfall. The development of irrigation is on the whole, fairly satisfactory. The gross assessed revenue for the year, was Rs. 1,90,862.

18. The rainfall in the North-West Frontier Province though only about 75 per cent of the normal, exceeded that of the previous year. During kharif the rainfall was good and timely. There was practically no rain in October and November but that of December was generally sufficient and well distributed; and was followed by copious falls in February. The agricultural and other conditions were favourable and the supplies in the rivers were sufficient. The area irrigated, though slightly less than the previous year, was in excess of the average of the previous triennium. The area matured however, compares favourably with both the previous year and the previous triennium.

Projects recommended by Irrigation Commission

25. In the succeeding paragraphs a brief reference is made to the action taken by the Government of India with regard to the projects recommended by the Irrigation Commission of 1901-03 for execution or investigation

Punjab.

Triple project

26. In the year 1901 a project was submitted to the Government of India for the irrigation of the lower Bari doab by means of a canal taking out of the Sutlej river. It was suggested to the Irrigation Commission which had just begun its labours that it would be more advantageous to carry out this work as an adjunct of a more comprehensive scheme for the irrigation of the Jech and Rechna and lower Bari doabs. This scheme relied on the possibility of utilising the ample surplus waters of the Jhelum river to serve these vast areas, thus leaving the Sutlej and Beas waters free for utilization in the Sutlej valley. Subsequent investigations showed that this idea was feasible and the project consisting of three distinct systems, the Upper Jhelum, the Upper Chenab, and the Lower Bari Doab canals was sanctioned in 1904 It has now been practically completed, the only important work which still remains to finish being the head-works of the Upper Jhelum canal at Mangla. The Upper Chenab canal was opened for irrigation by His Excellency the Viceroy on the 12th April 1912, and a year later Sir L. Dane opened the Lower Bari Doab canal and it is hoped that the Upper Jhelum canal, the remaining link in the chain, will be opened in October next. The total estimated cost of the combined system is 10½ crores of rupees of which 868½ lakhs were expended to the end of 1913-14.

27. The Irrigation Commission expressed a hope that it would be possible in the future to undertake the construction of a canal drawing its waters from the Indus for the irrigation of the wide expanse of desert in the Mianwali and Muzaffargarh districts known as the Sind Sagar doab. Such a work promised to be more costly and less remunerative than other existing works in the Punjab, but the Irrigation Commission recommended the construction as an experimental work of an inundation canal for the irrigation of the Muzaffargarh thal as a means of testing the capacity of the doab for irrigation. The Government of the Punjab, however, recommended that the investigation of the project should be deferred until other far more promising schemes then under consideration had advanced sufficiently to set free the necessary establishments and funds. To this the Government of India agreed.

28. It was suggested to the Commission that the Woolar lake in Kashmir should be converted into a storage reservoir for the purpose of augmenting the water supply of the Triple project. This proposal was however dropped in 1905 because the Government of India were advised that the areas to be served by the Triple Canal system would not require more water than was already available in the rivers from which the canals derived their supplies. It has since been found, however, that the dredging operations, by lowering the bed of the lake, have diminished the flow of the Jhelum river at certain periods It will consequently become necessary to construct a dam across the Jhelum in order to give an adequate supply of water to the several systems dependent on the cold weather supply of the river and the Government of India have recently ordered the preparation of a project for this purpose.

The Woolar Lake Storage scheme.

29. The Commission drew attention to the possibility of increasing irrigation in the Sutlej valley by the construction of weirs on the river so as to give a more assured and regular supply of water in all seasons to the existing British inundation canals in that tract Subsequent investigations have shown that a more extended system of irrigation is possible by which the Native States of Bahawalpur and Bikanir would also benefit. A preliminary project is now under investigation.

Sutlej Valley project.

30. The question of converting the net-work of inundation canals in Sind into perennial channels by means of weirs across the river Indus, has been considered at various intervals during the past 50 years. The Irrigation Commission recommended that sufficient data and information should be collected to enable a judgment to be formed as to the feasibility of the project and its cost As a result of the investigations that were made a scheme was drawn up for the construction, at a cost of some 7¾ crores, of a barrage at Sukkur with a canal on the left bank which would have been the largest irrigating channel in India. It was contemplated eventually to extend the scope of the work by the construction of a large canal on the right bank and by effecting a considerable extension of the existing Eastern Nara system but it was proposed in the first instance to confine attention to the barrage and the left bank (or Rohri) canal and the widening of the Eastern Nara supply channel only. The project as drawn up, however, did not meet with the approval of the technical advisers of the Secretary of State and it is being further investigated by the Bombay Engineers.

Sind.

31. When the Commission visited the Deccan a special officer had investigated for their information about half a dozen projects for canals with ghat-fed storage works. On their recommendation a hydrological and hydrographical survey of the tract was undertaken which has resulted in the preparation of a number of projects for the protection of this precarious tract. The Chankapur project has been finished, the Godavari canals are approaching completion, while work on the Pravara project is in progress. The Nira Right Bank canal project was sanctioned and commenced in 1912 In respect of size and cost it is the most important irrigation work of the protective class undertaken in India. The work involves the enlargement of the reservoir on Lake Whiting, which feeds the existing left bank canal, so that the capacity of the reservoir will be increased from 5,300 to 24,300 million cubic feet. A canal 109 miles long will be constructed and the waters will be distributed by 4 branches and 63 distributaries. The work, which is estimated to cost 257 lakhs of rupees and to occupy eleven years in construction, will afford protection to a tract in the Sholapore district which has the reputation of being one of the most liable to famine in the whole of India. Another important protective scheme the Gokak canal has recently been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. It contemplates the protection of some 493,000 acres in the Bijapur and Belgaum districts in British territory and in the Native States of Kolhapur, Mudhol, Jamkhandi, Sangli and Kurundwad at a cost of Rs. 197 lakhs.

Bombay Deccan

Gujarat.

32. The Commission suggested an examination of Gujarat with a view to utilising the waters of its principal rivers for irrigation purposes. In view, however, of the limited funds available for protective irrigation works the Government of India decided that the inception of any comprehensive scheme for Gujarat should be deferred until the more important and promising works in other parts of the Deccan were completed or at least far advanced.

Madras.

33. The Commission recommended the investigation of three very important works for this presidency; viz., the Tungabhadra project, and the Kistna and the Cauvery Reservoir projects. Detailed investigations have shewn that the first could not be carried out except at prohibitive cost and the project has accordingly been abandoned. The other two promise to prove productive. The plans and estimates of the Cauvery project, which will involve the construction of the largest dam of its kind in the world, have been approved by the technical advisers of the Government of India. The consideration of the project cannot, however, be further proceeded with until a settlement has been arrived at in respect of the claims of the Mysore Durbar in the waters of the Cauvery River. Plans and estimates for the Kistna Reservoir project have also been prepared and are being revised in the light of certain suggestions made by the Inspector General of Irrigation in India. A project to reclaim Divi Island, a fertile deltaic tract at the mouth of the Kistna, by means of flood banks and to irrigate this area by a pumping installation, which was approved by the Irrigation Commission, has been carried out. The work is now in operation.

United Provinces.

34. The Irrigation Commission delineated in rough outline a project for the utilization of the waters of the Sarda river in Oudh for supplementing the supplies of canal systems which derive their water from the Ganges and Jumna rivers. The scheme aimed at improving not only irrigation from the main canal systems in the United Provinces but also at increasing the supplies at the head of the Western Jumna canal in the Punjab, and so relieving precarious tracts under the command of that system. The proposals were thoroughly investigated, and a project estimated to cost some 6½ crores was prepared on the lines suggested by the Commission. In view of certain difficulties inherent in this scheme the Government of the United Provinces has drawn up an alternative project, estimated to cost Rs. 330 lakhs, which is now engaging the consideration of the Government of India.

Besides this project, the Commission recommended the investigation of canals from the rivers flowing through Bundelkhand, and the Mirzapore and Allahabad Districts. The investigations which were carried out with commendable energy have resulted in the execution of the Ken and Dhassan canals, the Dhukwan Reservoir project, and many other smaller schemes. The result is that the trans-Jumna Districts of these Provinces which were previously so liable to famine, are now fairly well protected.

Central Provinces.

35. The Commission recommended a thorough and scientific examination of the Central Provinces with a view to prospecting for canal and tank projects from the rivers and streams then running uselessly to the sea. A number of small but very useful tanks designed to protect precarious tracts from famine have come into existence as a result of the measures taken on the Commission's recommendation. In addition, three large canal systems known as the Tendula, the Wein-ganga and the Mahanadi canals, which will derive their supplies from the rivers after which they have been named, have been sanctioned. The last named system has already come into operation.

Bengal and Bihar and Orissa.

36. The Commission did not see much scope for extension of irrigation in these Provinces and did not make any recommendations beyond suggesting the investigation of a few small projects in Tirhoot and Chota Nagpur.

Subsequent experience has, however, shewn that the execution of these schemes cannot be justified.
